FARMS, FARMERS AND FARMING.

The word farm, meaning now a tract of land cultivated for the production of food for man and beast, came from the Anglo Saxon word feorm, a feast, and through a sort of evolution has become the present word, farm. It came down to us in this way. In olden times the lands were owned by lords and other persons occupying, under the then form of government, high positions. They let lands to tillers on condition that they supplied the lord with so many nights entertainments during the year. These entertainments consisted of feasts. Hence these feorms, or feasts, finally by a figure of speech were used to designate the lands. Thus such and such a lord's rent, the feorm, the feast or entertainments did, by degrees, become applied to the land rented. So from feorm, a feast, the word farm has descended, which now means, usually, a considerable tract of land cultivated for the production of grains, grasses, vegetables and other food products.

Next we consider the other word, farmer. Literally speaking a farmer is one who lives on, and subsists upon the products of a farm, or one who owns a farm or a conversant with true farm work, although he may have given up the work and taken up some other occupation. It also applies to one who collects rents, taxes, duties or imports. But in a general sense it means one who is a tiller of the ground. The word farming means the mode, manner and process of tilling the ground.

Farming takes a wide range of significance because it involves a wide scope of science. It not only applies to plowing, planting and sowing and cultivating the ground but also the knowledge of the best way, time and method of tilling; the time to plant and sow; the nature of the plants and the adaptation of the soil for the plant or fruit it is desired to produce; but also to some knowledge of the chemical properties of the soil either theoretical or practical. It is not necessary that a man must be a practical chemist with a complete laboratory in order to be a good farmer, but experience, close observation and a record of facts in his experience regarding the different soils, are necessary to make a good farmer, if coupled with good and diligent work.

Most farmers are too negligent of keeping notes of their experience and observations while pursuing their farm labors. Memory is too treacherous to depend upon to keep up to date with all his experiences and observations, and thus he loses much that if correctly preserved would be of great benefit to him in after years. Farmers also ought to take and read some good farm journal specially devoted to farm work. Such great benefit in their line of work by such papers where the experiences and observations of others are great helps. The foregoing is mentioned as a sort of suggestion to farmers, and not to teach them their duty.

Further, from practical experience the writer has learned that prior tilling, that is, a good cultivation of the ground before it is planted is better than cultivation after planting. The condition of the ground before planting is of greater concern than many suppose. If the ground is too dry, especially in Oregon, it is impracticable to plow it, and if too wet it does more injury than good. Another thing that ought not to be overlooked. Lands need rest, so to speak. Ground in constant yearly use loses much of its fertility. A continuous succession of crops exhausts the productive qualities of land. These qualities must be restored somehow, either by artificial fertilizers or by the restorative agencies of the elements; wind, rain, snow, frost and sunshine. All these are great natural restoratives. Their full benefit is not so great while producing as when at rest. Therefore portions of farms should rest every year by what is termed summer fallow. There are two advantages in this method. First, the ground is measurably resuscitated by the action of the elements as above mentioned and then the ground is in a better condition for early seeding, which is a great matter to consider. During this resting season if some fertilizers can be added it will be so much the better.

A FARMER.

TURNING A TREE INTO A NEWS-PAPER.

At a wood pulp and paper manufactory at Elsenhath, Austria, recently the question was asked: "In how short a time can you turn a tree into a newspaper?" The answer was given by an actual trial. A notary public and other witnesses were called, and at exactly 7:35 o'clock in the morning operations were begun in a forest near the factory by felling three trees. These were stripped, cut into pieces and reduced to pulp by mechanical means. The pulp was thrown into a tub and mixed with the ingredients required to turn it into paper. The paste thus formed was passed through the rolling-machine, and at 9:31 o'clock—one hour and fifty-nine minutes after the felling of the trees—the first sheet of paper issued from the machine. The paper was hurried to printing-house more than two miles away, where the type had already been set up, and at ten o'clock two hours and twenty-five minutes from the beginning of the experiment in the forest, a printed newspaper was turned out from the press. The owners of the factory say they can repeat the feat in twenty minutes less time.—Youth's Companion.

Santiago is Raided.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Dec. 4.—This city has been thrown into consternation by a descent of the Spanish police. The homes of many peaceable citizens were entered after the town had gone to bed. It is known that at least 25 persons were arrested and hurried to prison. Nearly all of Eastern Cuba is in the hands of the Cubans, save the city. The Spanish policy of arresting citizens suspected of sympathy with the insurgents had long since spread among all classes. The recent arrests are further evidence of General Weyler's determination to wage war on citizens in their homes, as well as on the armed bodies in the field.

No one can learn any definite reason for the sudden arrests. There were three women among the prisoners. All were locked in the jail Incomunicados. Many were sent to Morro castle. Among the captives was a doctor, two lawyers and four merchants. All under the general accusation of plotting against Spanish authority.

A special from Guimaro, Camaguey, gives the following details of the death of Major Dana Osgood, the football player who commanded a Cuban battery during the recent siege of the town of Guimaro. General Garcia ordered Major Osgood to open fire upon the Spanish forts. Two hours later a large fort, known as Fort Montau, located on a hill 700 yards from the town, was abandoned by its defenders, who took refuge in the town.

On the second day of the siege, Major Osgood, under heavy fire from the Spaniards, was training one of his pieces on the forts. A Mauer ball struck him in the forehead. He uttered the word "Well," and bending forward on his cannon, hugged it and breathed his last in behalf of Cuban liberty. The news of his death deeply impressed President Cisneros and the commanding officers, all of whom had great regard for the American officer.

The Spaniards, who had an abundant supply of ammunition, kept up an incessant fire against the Cuban entrenchments. General Garcia, on October 27, made up his mind to capture the place by assault. The Spaniards had abandoned all the forts outside of the town and made themselves strong on the inside. They had taken commanding positions on the stone buildings and massive stone church in the public square. At a signal General Cebreco and Capote, at the head of their men, charged the town from different quarters. The Spanish garrison took refuge in the old church and strongly barricaded it. General Garcia ordered that the three guns be brought to bear upon the stone structure, and fire was at once opened on it. One of the shots from a 12-pounder mortally wounded the Spanish ish officer in command, Major Marines, and killed some of his men.

Shortly after a tremendous cry of "Viva Cuba libre" came from the Cubans. The Spaniards had signaled their unconditional surrender.

K. of L. Still for Free Silver.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 20.—The general assembly of the Knights of Labor declared today for free silver by adding to the 17th plank the declaration submitted by the committee on law. As originally framed, this plank held that interest bearing bonds, bills of credit or notes should not be issued by the government, but that when need arises, the emergency should be met by legal tender non-interest-bearing money. The added clause declares for the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, regardless of the action of any other nation.

Another Mine Exploded.

ATLANTA, Dec. 4.—Rev. A. J. Diez, the Baptist missionary of Havana, was driven from Cuba several months ago, on account of alleged affiliation with the insurgents, has reached this city from Texas, where he has been engaged in church work.

"I was told," said he, "that everything was at a standstill in Havana, there being nothing going on in the city. As I understand it, everything is dead as a door-n
