UNITED STATES SENATOR.

Until the people of the United States learn to exercise good business sense in politics as well as in ordinary every day transactions they will not succeed. A man in business does not stop to enquire what a man's personal opinions are on ethics when he wants good service in his business. His only question is: Is he a good and faithful worker? If the applicant for work can furnish satisfactory evidence that he is a good and faithful workman, the employer does not case a beau, if a farmer, whether the applicant takes snuff, drinks soda water or a little wine for his is good service.
