THE PULPIT.

Rev. W. P. Anderson, late of Guysboro, Canada, preached Sunday morning and evening in the Baptist church. The subject of the evening discourse was "revivals." Mr. Anderson introduced his subject with a prelude on the universal desire of the people everywhere for a revival of business, trade and commerce. All of which on the plain of temporal affairs was proper, just and commendable. After thus preparing his hearers for his ideas of revival of religion he made a very logical dissertation upon the necessity of the revival of moral and social practices which adorn the human character, viz: The necessity for a revival of family worship as a necessary precedent to a true Christian, and without he makes but little progress; the necessity of regular attendance at church as a means of growth in grace; the necessity of obedience to law and order; the necessity of children obeying and giving proper respect to parents. He said for the last 20 years he had seldom noted the son or daughter speak to or of their parents as father and mother, but on the contrary speak of them as the "old man" or 'old woman." This, he thought, showed a want of true filial regard for their parents. Mr. Anderson also pointed to the necessity of a revival of sympathy for our brother man; a want of a revival of friendship and love for all; a revival of a love of truth, a love of justice, a love of righteousness. Let all these enabling sentiments be revived in our hearts and the revival of religion is an easy matter. Mr. Anderson made a very sensible and truthful talk to his hearers replete with good advice. He said men get excited on politics and other worldly matters that excite no wonderment, but when a sinner gets excited about his soul's salvation he is looked upon by many as unduly excited and that it won't last long—it will soon die out. There are too many Christians, he thought, that are opposed to revivals of religion like those preached by Whitfiled, the Wesleys, Moody and other eminent preachers in years gone by. Mr. Anderson preached a very able discourse and was at times quite eloquent, and withal, quite liberal. He talked plain, good sense.

WOMEN AS SHOP KEEPERS.

It has long been thought that women were not capable of managing business successfully. They were for a long time considered as not capable of performing the duties of sales clerks. But a series of years of experience has disproven that and they are known to be very efficient in that capacity. But the croakers against women, though driven to acknowledge that women can measure calico, ribbons and laces equal to men, still look upon women as disqualified to manage a mercantile or any other business of a complicated character. But, they are likewise compelled to witness mercantile establishments conducted with marked success by women and that a greater percentage of women dealers succeed than of the sterner sex.

In Roseburg we have the example of successful women. Mrs. M. Josephson of this city conducts the business of the most extensive dry goods house, as well as did her husband. Then there is Mrs. N. Boyd, who conducts a large grocery store on the corner of Jackson and Cass streets. Mrs. H. Easton successfully manages an extensive grocery store on Jackson street near Douglas. Mrs. Casebeer is proprietor of a grocery store on the corner of Jackson and Douglas, and Mrs. G. W. Rapp conducts a grocery store on Cass street near the S. P. depot.

All those women are doing well, popular with the public and command a fair share of patronage—are making a good living—in short they are as successful as their male competitors in the several lines of business in which they are engaged.

BIDS REJECTED.

The court has rejected all bids "for making the jail more secure," on the ground, doubtless, of economy.

The court having learned by experience that jail skippers are as lively under democratic sheriffs as they were under republican sheriffs, concluded to make the jail more secure so that the turnkeys could sleep soundly without visions of escapes to disturb them. But as democracy is no surety against jail skipping, the court sought to prevent it by advertising for bids to make the jail more secure. As three months have elapsed since Hinman's, Sawyer's and Reynold's escape, the court begins doubtless to think the democrat sheriff has become more watchful, and it can now dispense with "making the jail more secure," and thus save to the taxpayers a few hundred dollars. Therefore with this idea of economy in view, the court no doubt has concluded to reject the bids "for making the jail more secure."

Should, however, another dig out occur, no expense, we opine, will bar a contract to enable our democratic officials to keep prisoners till they are tried. After that the friends of the incarcerated can come up to the grating in the night and pass in a saw to cut the bars of the grate as they did in Sam Brown's case. Democracy is now put upon its good behaviour—or rather good luck and republican indulgence.

Not a few who read what Mr. Robert Rowls, of Holland, Va., has to say below, will remember their own experience under like circumstances: "Last winter I had la grippe which left me in a low state of health. I tried numerous remedies, none of which did me any good, until I was induced to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The first bottle of it so far relieved me that I was enabled to attend to my work, and the second bottle effected a cure." For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by A. C. Marsters & Co.

BREEDING BUFFALOES.

Some of the Hybrids That Are Produced Are Fine Animals.

A famous Montana character is Charlie Allard of Ravalli. Mr. Allard is famous mainly because he is one of the owners of the largest herd of buffalo in the country, and no man living has given to these now rare animals more patient study and attention than he.

"The coldest storms of winter do not trouble them," he says, "for their thick, shaggy coats are windproof. During the heavy snows and blizzards they climb the hills, and turning their breasts to the wind defy the storm. They feed where the snow is thinnest. Cattle are driven before a storm and will often go with a wind 60 or 100 miles from the accustomed range unless they reach a sheltered spot. Horses turn their backs to a storm, but the buffaloes face it every time. They seem to keep in about the same condition of flesh the year round and are as good eating in the spring as they are in the fall, and a buffalo steak is about as fine a morsel as ever a man made a meal of. About two years ago I purchased the Jones herd of buffalo, which was at Omaha. There were 31 of them in the herd, and we paid (for I have a partner now) $18,000 for the lot. Marchiel Pablo, a well known cattleman, has joined me in the business and for the past year has had entire charge of them, so that I do not know just exactly how many we have—about 140, I should judge, now, and by next fall there will be fully 200 of them.

"We have experimented in crossing buffalo with all breeds of cattle, and the results are most satisfactory. The Polled Angus stock when crossed with the buffalo produces a magnificent animal. The fur is finer and closer than that of the buffalo, and the meat is sweet and wholesome. We are producing as many of these animals as possible, but will not put any on the market for several years yet. We are not selling any buffalo either, for the reason that we need them all at present. We receive letters every day from museums, parks and shows wanting them in all quantities, and though we might dispose of one or two singly we have no pairs to sell.

"A good buffalo hide is worth $100 now in the market, and heads bring from $200 to $500 when mounted, and the value of these is steadily increasing, so that buffalo breeding is as good an investment as real estate. Our herd is about the only one I know of any size. There is a small one in the Texas panhandle, and these, with the few that roam in the national park, are the sole remnants of the thousands which roamed the prairies but a few years ago."—Anaconda (Mon.) Standard.

TWO INVENTIONS IN ONE.

The Kinetograph the Latest Marvel Turned Out by Edison.

"We are progressing, progressing," said Thomas A. Edison to a Boston Herald representative when informed that his retreat had been invaded for the purpose of getting information concerning the latest and greatest of his inventions, the one which is being eagerly awaited and which very few have had a chance to see—that is, the combination of the phonograph with the kinetoscope, the contrivance to which Mr. Edison applied the term kinetograph on this occasion.

"The object of this machine," he said, "is to afford the spectator two inventions in one—that is, two senses are simultaneously appealed to. Suppose, we will say, an opera is to be reproduced. The phonograph already repeats the sound. The kinetoscope afterward affords a view of the movements. Now, however, we wish to combine the two and combine them far more effectively than ever their distinct elements have heretofore been rendered by separate instruments.

"Thus, if one wished to hear and see the concert or the opera, it would only be necessary to sit down at home, look upon a scene and see the performance reproduced exactly in every movement and at the same time the voices of the players and singers, the music of the orchestra, the various sounds that accompany a performance of this sort, will be reproduced exactly. The end attained is a perfect illusion. One really hears and sees the play, because the conditions necessary to the suitable impressions upon the eye and ear are obtained."

An Unlucky Draw.

Don Simplicio, to dispel the clouds of melancholy that cast a gloom over his spirits, has taken to theater going. "Ernani" was produced, and everybody spoke highly of the performance, our hero among the rest.

"But there is one fault about it," he said on coming out of the house one evening.

"What is it?"

"I'll tell you. In the third act, where the conspiracy takes place, they draw lots to ascertain which of them is to kill Charles V. Now, what was drawn the first night? Ernani. And the second? Ernani. And the third? Ernani again. Always Ernani. Six nights running! Now, that's unlikely on the face of it. For the same name to be drawn once or twice may pass, but six times running—that is too much."

His remarks were received with a regular ovation.—Giornale delle Donne.

Scott's Favorites.

Scott believed that "Waverley" was his best novel and the "Lady of the Lake" his best poem. He and the Ballantynes had more than one lively discussion on the subject, but he would never admit a change of opinion. He knew the "Lady of the Lake" by heart and once repeated the whole to prove the fact.

A Crime.

"Is it true that Maud Makeface was arrested for intimidating voters?"

"Yes. She threatened to kiss every man who would vote for Johnson."—Indianapolis Journal.
