PUBLIC SCHOOL EXERCISES.

Professor Hamlin's Charges Give a Good Account of Themselves.

The assembly room of the public schools was taxed to its utmost capacity on Friday afternoon last by patrons and friends who had gathered to witness the exercises in commemoration of the graduating of those who had so far advanced in their studies as to pass out of the schools into higher institutions of learning or to grapple at once with the problems of life.

Professor Hamlin called the assembly to order, and Rev. F. L. Moore of the M. E. Church offered prayer, when the salutatory essay was delivered by Miss Cora Eddy. This was followed by a solo by Miss Ruby Gordon, which was very nicely rendered, Miss Mettie Rapp accompanying on the piano. "Our school days" was the subject of an essay by Miss Reine Blackman. One of the most interesting features of the exercises was "The Fairy's Revenge." This was given by a number of little folks, a bad fairy had caused a sleep of a hundred years to fall on a baby and all the household. At the end of that time the good fairies reappeared, also the prince who woke them up, and all went merrily about the waking. It was very nicely given. Miss Rapp accompanied the little singers and played the marches. Miss Daisy Perkins gave the recitation, "Dead, name unknown." An essay by Eva Howard followed, subject, "Some reasons for pursuing a higher education," then Edwin McKenzie favored the audience with a selection of instrumental music. The recitation, "The Spelling Bee at Angella," was given by Miss Sylvia Blackman, then came a very sweet song by Miss Belle Catching, "The Flight of the Birds." The valedictory essay was given by Miss Della Cole, "Excelsior, our motto." All the essays were exceptionally good, and would have been a credit to older persons.

On the conclusion Hon. W. F. Benjamin, chairman of the board of directors made some appropriate remarks and presented the graduates with their certificates. The graduating class consisted of Eva Howard, Daisy Perkins, Julian Josephson, Cora Eddy, Della Cole, Bessie Wharton and Reine Blackman. The hall was nicely and tastefully decorated with flowers and evergreens by the elder scholars and the blackboards contained appropriate mottoes. The occasion will long be remembered by the participants.

Frightful Accident.
LOOKING GLASS, June 27, 1897.
Last Thursday this community was greatly shocked to learn of the serious accident at the Groat & Arnold mill just west of here, resulting in the instant death of Willard Groat, one of the proprietors. At about nine o'clock that morning as Mr. Groat was rolling a large log from the skidway down the slight incline to the saw carriage his cant hook slipped and he was thrown backward onto the rapidly revolving saw which cut him diagonally from the shoulder down to the waist severing his right arm and cutting off his right temple. The sad accident was witnessed by his partner, W. M. Arnold, his nephew, Ray Wright, his sons, Rue and Charles and a neighbor, Mr. Johnson. Mr. Groat was a man greatly respected by all who knew him. He was industrious, hard working and a thorough mechanic. Coming to coast from Gladwin county, Michigan some seven years ago, locating first at Forest Grove, Or., where he remained for a year, thence moving to Bay City, Tillamook county. A little over a year ago he came to this place, where, after a time his family joined him. Last fall he and W. M. Arnold bought the old Laird mill. Mr. Groat leaves a family consisting of a wife, two sons and two daughters, the eldest being a son of nineteen years and the youngest a daughter of ten. His other relatives in this section are his niece, Mrs. A. B. Foster; his brother-in-law, Eugene Wright and a nephew Ray Wright. His father, aged 90 years, is still living at his old home in Michigan, where he was one of the first settlers. The remains were buried here on Friday, Mr. James Denning conducting the funeral, Rev. Moore of Roseburg preaching the sermon. The services were attended by almost the entire community. On behalf of the family and relatives of deceased, who greatly appreciate the kindness of friends and neighbors in this, their hour of sore affliction, thanks are hereby tendered.
