Of the latter the declarations of 1765 and 1774 were those which chiefly served as a basis for the declara-

"The people of this state have the sole and exclusive right of governing them-selves as a free, sovereign and independ-ent state, and do, and forever hereafter shall, exercise and enjoy every power, jurisdiction and right pertaining thereto which is not or may not hereafter be by them expressly delegated to the United States of America in congress assem

It will be seen that this contains substantially the tenth amendment to the federal constitution, but is more strongly erence to the relations between church and state that the general declarations of these constitutions were in most strik ing oppositions to those specific provis-ions. Nearly all of them had clauses touching the sacredness of religious lib erty and the necessity of the separation of church and state. The specific provisions, however, did not blend well with the high-scanding generalities. Mr. Webster tells us that only three of the Traces of the laws originally passed in England, where church and state are united, are still found on the statute books of many of the states, and others have been swept away very recently. Even now there is nothing to prevent the establishment of any partieplar religion in any state, provided any sect is strong enough to amend the state constitution to that end.
