Nothing Ventured, Northing Gained.

I was courtin' Arabella
Months before I got a kiss.
When I'd asked for one she'd always
Blush an' say: "'Taint proper
Chris."

But one night as we was partin'
Somethin' seemed to whisper this:
"Askin' for a kiss is useless;
Grip her tight an' steal one, Chris."

So I gripped her an' I kissed her—
Kissed her cheeks an' lips an' hair;
An' I helt her to my buzzum,
An I squeezed her waist fer fair!

Did she squeel? Nit! Quicker'n lightnin'
She was kissin' back like fun,
She'd have kept it up till midnight
If I hadn't quit an' run!

Say, that night I learned a lesson,
An' that lesson it is this
Askin' fer a kiss is useless,
Grip yer girl an take yer kiss.

OPPOSES FUSION.

The Chairman of the Populist State Committee Addresses His Fellow Populists.

(John W. Young in the Oregonian.)

I am in receipt of letters from many populists making inquiry as to what will be the policy of the peoples' party in the coming campaign, and especially asking as to the position of the party upon the question of fusion or union. To answer all these letters separately would involve too much time and labor, hence this statement, which I ask you to publish.

The first question is easily answered in the only way possible. It is not within my province to say what the policy of the party will be, for no man can know until after the state convention shall have met and formulated its platform. It is certain, however, that it must follow the altruistic lines of its mission, or it will perish.

In a general answer to the inquiries, I can say for myself alone what I think, and give the reasons therefor. The peoples' party was born of a necessity. The conditions which invoked its birth still exist as reasons for its perpetuity, and are more accentuated now than when the Omaha platform was promulgated. But as a pretense for merging and submerging the peoples' party with and into the democracy, it is claimed that that great national organization, with its five millions of voters, at Chicago in 1896, was stricken, like Paul, with the light of heaven, and immediately forsook its sinful ways, becoming instantly clear in body, soul and record. No one familiar with the duplicity within a few days subsequently it practiced upon the peoples' party national convention at St. Louis, and with the contumely and contempt the democratic leaders and press have since leaped upon the populists in every state in the Union, believes for a single moment in the sincerity of the democracy's sudden conversion or its pretentions of favoring any economic or governmental reform, either national, state or local.

Immediately after the close of the polls in November, 1896, the national democratic leaders, including Mr. Bryan, himself, entered upon the campaign of 1900, with "free silver" as the shibboleth, and Bryan as the foreordained apostle of the cause—under the democratic banner. In every movement made by them since, under various guises in various states, to mobilize the silver forces, the aim and purpose incidentally has been to destroy the peoples' party organization and absorb the "free silver republican." And, in proof of this, as the time for the '98 elections approaches, the "silver forces" have periodical notice served upon them that they can have union, free silver and reform only within the democratic fold.

If free silver constituted the whole, sole demand of populism, or if the restoration of silver alone were potential enough to readjust society to the industrial conditions that have fallen on the world as the result of labor-saving inventions and the corresponding cooperation of capital to exploit labor by means of trusts and combines, fostered and protected by law, then the democratic party's demand that the reform forces shall come under its banner would be naturally reasonable and just, if its sudden conversion were truly like Paul's—since.e. But, the matter of democratic sincerity aside, great as the silver question is, involving, as it does, a stake aggregating billions of dollars, to say nothing of the constitutional questions it raises and the criticisms as to national integrity it provokes, it is not the fundamental question at issue. It is merely one of its incidentals, as the preservation of the Union was incidental to the real issue presented to the attention of the country through the old abolition party. The question at issue then was slavery. It is a question of slavery now that is at issue. Does any one need telling what the attitude of the democracy was then? Must it be pointed out that the bourbon democracy of the South, the same old gang that is in the saddle now, resisted the altruistic doctrine of human freedom by force of arms in the interest of a slave aristocracy? That since that party went down in the shock of battle it has time and again dallied with this identical silver question and fiat money for political power, having only recently discovered that it favors free silver because democracy is opposed to a moneyed aristocracy—when the other fellow has the money.

When did it become the guardian of civil liberty and industrial freedom? It holds the solid South solid today through its kuklux methods, crystalized into laws and customs which cannot be broken, and which subvert the fundamental theory of popular government. Such effective means to control the people are not ignored by tyrants, and the example has not been wasted on the republican North, for it has emulated the methods of Hannas, and never since Hayes was counted in has a republican platform demanded a free ballot and a fair count.

Where are patriots to pin their faith? To the record of the democracy? The prosperity promises of republican plancracy? In this state there are thousands of democrats who sincerely believe in their own and their party's demand for the restoration of silver, but, even as their knowledge of the fundamental principle underlying that demand is measured, so may their real devotion to the cause be gauged. If for that fundamental principle they stand ready to throw down their party organization, as the free silver republicans have done, and as every populist did precedent to his becoming a populist, let them show the faith which is in them by serving notice upon their bourbon leaders that they will train with the populists in the North until in the South there is assured a free ballot and a fair count, without which popular government is a sham, the people are powerless and reform is impossible. To win with an ally who denies this boon were treason to liberty.

We are told we cannot win in this state without fusion. After watching the course of political events closely for two years in Oregon and other states, my candid judgment is that we cannot and ought not to win with it. It will not only end in defeat, but it will result finally in the disintegration of the peoples' party, with at least 50 per cent of the populists in the state going into a new political organization before the June election. The nearest approach that can be made to a union, if it can be made at all, might be by the indorsement of the populist platform and ticket by the democracy, and that party's absolute retirement from the field of politics in this state. I am perfectly well aware of the contempt this statement will meet with at the hands of "hungry hunters," but unless I have been greatly deceived and quite misunderstand the populist heart and purpose, such will be the nearest approach to an effective union of the silver forces that can be made in Oregon, so far as the populists are concerned.

Speaking for myself, if I were a delegate to the state convention, and could be assured that such indorsement would be given and that the democratic machine would abandon the political field, I would do all in my power to accord the free silver voters outside of the populist ranks a perfectly fair and reasonable representation on the populist state ticket—conditional, always, that such populist ticket should be the only one placed in the field against the gold standard nominees. If this were done, every populist would fully understand that it would only be an acceptance on their part of the assignment of the democracy's bankrupt stock, for they recognize the fact that the issue in this congressional campaign will turn upon Gage's currency reform plan, in contesting which the free silver man will have to get off the Chicago platform to defend the irredeemable-fiat greenback, or let that go by default and content himself with a defense of the fifty cents of fiat in the silver dollar.

With regard to fusion in the counties, if it shall not be accomplished, as herein suggested, by the retirement of the Bryan democracy from the field, then let the fusion populist ask himself upon what lines and for what reason a fusion or union with the democracy should be sought or accepted, remembering that a political party is responsible to public opinion for the official acts of the officials it elects, and that divided responsibility is no responsibility at all. The peoples' party ought to be and would be responsible to public opinion for the official conduct of the officers it might elect under the procedure here suggested, and for the clean, honest performance of their duty it would claim the undivided credit. In every county of the state where our party has been in power, economy, efficiency and honesty have marked the career of the officials. County scrip has gone up, official extravagance has gone down, the treasurer's debts are being paid, taxes are being paid, taxes are being reduced, and public justice is administered with a vigorous clean hand. What has the democratic party in these counties to offer as a record upon which to base a fusion with the populists? The populists would not be fools, they would be knaves to share their political credit with the rogues they have ousted, and in counties where they have not won they would betray the principles they profess by joining hands with any party whose record is smut, simply to get a share of the loaves and fishes. They are, to be sure, thousands of able, sincere and honest men in the democratic ranks, but no one of them, nor all of them together are as strong as their party machine or superior to their individual prejudices; otherwise, they would have purified or left their party long ago.

To me, personally, the result of the referendum vote upon the question of fusion is of little moment, If the object lesson of fusion in the presidential campaign has been lost upon other populists, it has not been upon me. I supported Mr. Bryan loyally and with all the ability I may possess, not because my heart was in it, but because my party in national convention so decreed it, and my own position in the people's party of Oregon forced me to obey. The peoples-party voters of this state may decide to again fuse with the democracy. If they do so decide, they will fail to fuse me with it. I did not leave the republican party to join the democracy voluntarily, nor did I join the peoples' party to become an involuntary adjunct to bourbonism. I cannot be caught in the same democratic trap twice.

JOHN C. YOUNG,
Chairman Peoples' Party State Central Committee.
