THE GREAT UMPQUA.

[Concluded from 1st page.]

head of steamboat navigation on the Umpqua, is an old and thrifty town. Gardiner, Douglas county's only sea port, at the mouth of the Umpqua, (Oregon's second largest river) on Winchester Bay, is the seat of large lumbering and shipping business. The Gardiner Mill Co. cut and ship annually in their own vessels over thirteen million feet of lumber. Their pay roll and logging accounts at the mill alone amounts to $85,000. Captain Reed usually puts up 20,000 cases and 1,000 barrels of salmon, value $45,000. A creamery and cheese factory with 400 cows do a large business. Grain, fruit, vegetables, eggs and poultry also amount to a large sum.

Southward is Dillard Station with extensive areas of fruit, largely prune, and other fruits, grain, hops, etc. Myrtle Creek, a thriving village, having flouring and planing mills, fruit, distillery, gold and copper mines, grain and fruit industries of great magnitude, its vicinity being the original home of the prune industry in Douglas county. Riddle, a progressive town, being the center of an extensive grain, fruit and mining country, the shipping point for Canyonville and the South Umpqua. Glendale and Galesville on the Cow creek, are noted for an extensive placer mining section of the county. Canyonville on the old stage road and South Umpqua, with flouring and saw mills, does a large business in mining supplies and agricultural produce of every description, being shipping point for a fertile region of the county. The village of Looking Glass, eight miles west of Roseburg, is the center of a large agricultural district.

Each of the towns and districts above referred to, afford ample opportunities to engage in business, agriculture in all its branches, and manufacturing pursuits.

It is impossible, in brief space allowed in this article, to enumerate and do justice to the many industries, and undeveloped resources of this county. In many cases difficult to collect exact facts, and to give a better idea will append a short statement of established industries and their annual out-put where known to writer.

There are 12 water-power flouring mills and many saw mills, two large steam mills, tile and brick works, box factories, sash door, etc, two fruit distilleries and many fruit drying establishments.

Some of the commodities shipped during 1897:

Wheat and flour equal to 600,000 bushels	$195,000
Oats, potatoes and hay	126,000
Dried prunes, three million lbs	100,000
