Supt. Murray of the Noonday, reports that they recently tapped the richest vein of ore ever struck in the mine. At a depth of 400 feet from the surface, the vein is eight feet wide and free-milling ore running from $20 to $100 per ton. They opened up a large body of ore, sufficient to keep their 20-stamp mill running for several years. The company is going to run 300 or 400 feet more of tunnels before starting their mill, in order to have levels to block out before stopping commences. There is already 3,000 feet of tunnels in this mine. The vein will be increased to rush the tunneling.

Violent Storm at Ashland.

Monday afternoon, about 2 o'clock, the heaviest thunderstorm on record, spread over Ashland creek basin, lasting 1 hour in its severity and petering out two hours later. It poured forth two large courses of hail and lightning flashed, and the thunder roared. The streets of Ashland seemed like winter creeks. The precipitation was one and seventy six one hundredth inches, the amount of which can be realized, when the record for the past 17 years, shows it is only exceeded by the average rainfall for the months of November, December, January and February. The damage to the fruit amounting to little. The electric light company's ditch was filled up, and it took 30 men until late at night to clean it out. J. A. Gross lost $300 in cigars that were ruined in the Depot hotel cellar.

The Mines of Bohemia.

A writer in Tuesday's Eugene Register has the following to say in regard to them:

"Bohemia is destined to be one of the liveliest mining camps on the coast within the next two or three years, and the people of Eugene are making a serious mistake by not putting forth every effort to secure the trade of this wonderfully rich mining district, of which Mr. H. S. Reed of Deer Lodge, Montana, a rich banker and mining expert, says unhesitatingly that he never saw as rich ore in any camp as there is in the Bohemia district, or as great natural surface showing ledges. He has backed up his opinion with a $10,000 purchase and has from 6 to 20 men now developing his claims. Mr. Reed is now there superintending the work, this being the seventh trip he has made this summer.

"The ledges all through this district are very wide, running from 25 to 100 feet, and have in them both free-milling ore and sulphates. The product from the free-milling ore will more than pay all the expenses, thus leaving the sulphate as that much pure profit. One of our party broke off a piece of ore weighing not over two ounces, from the very summit of a mountain from which a 50-foot ledge projected. On returning to camp he crushed the ore and found from 15 to 20 colors. The sulphates when he could not reduce and which were plainly visible, would probably produce as much more in value.

"On approaching the camp one imagines that there is a cannonading going on. Every few minutes one hears blasting and the mountain sides reverberate and throw back the echoes continually. The entire camp is a scene of activity, although there is no excitement. Roads are being built, mines developed, tunnels and cross-cuts made by owners of the claims, each being confident that he will in due time receive the proper reward for his labors. There are over 500 claims taken already. One does not hear of extravagant statements made of 'claims being worth millions,' but each one goes his way quietly, willing to let time and work decide the value of his claim.

"The camp is one of the most orderly camps I have ever seen. During the three days I was there I did not hear a single profane word. No liquors are sold there (we did not try to buy any, at least the writer did not. I can't answer for the rest of the crowd) and a prominent miner of the place told us that nine votes out of ten would be cast against opening a saloon in the place. Many of the miners have their families there."
