OUR INCREASING INVENTORY.

The Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department officially assures us that the exports of our country for the year ending June 30, 1895, exceed the enormous value of $1,200,000,000. No month since last August has fallen below $100,000,000, while the exports for May last amounted to $10,239,200.

The imports for the same year exceed $600,000,000 in value. It can now be said that our exports are double in value to our imports. We are selling twice as much as we are buying—a most inspiring spectacle—and a result as commendable and significant in the affairs of a nation as in those of an individual. I have found no other instance within the century where the exports of a nation have been double the imports. Indeed, it is said this record is without a parallel in the annals of the world!

To maintain this splendid reputation and to exceed this high standard among all nations, it is essential that we shall anticipate our further development in the near future and wisely avail ourselves of such acquisition of territory, naval and coaling stations and such advantages by treaties and commercial agreements as shall enable us not only to enlarge the scope of our export trade and further multiply the market places for our varied, wonder-ous and rapidly increasing productions, but also to protect and defend the trade which shall follow the flag.

In the imperial domain which is now the republic to remain content with its present advance, or is it written for the future that accession and annexation shall still further progress until we shall secure the island approaches in the Atlantic which under foreign flags and rival nation still menace the way to the Gulf ports and to the great rivers which carry to the markets of the world the rich commerce of many of the states of the Union?

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

The intelligent judgment of the American people, which has so often approved the past policy of our country in reference to the many splendid acquisitions to our domain, will not hesitate to secure still further advantages by the same wise diplomacy. These have now been realized as to Hawaii, and the track of our immense commerce along the oceanic highway thus far largely protected, is there not still another important duty incumbent upon us, as imperative as it is essential, and which appeals to every public-spirited and patriotic American? This is, and that duty calls for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal, to be not only constructed, but owned and controlled by our government. With the canal completed, our Atlantic and Pacific seaboards will be brought nearer together by almost 11,000 miles. In the event of war with any nation this canal will bring our military and naval forces from both oceans with quick and safe dispatch at any threatened point along our coasts or upon our inland possessions.

The very necessity which such an advantage would confer would of itself often prevent conflicts, as no nation would hastily engage our country in war with such a safeguard and such an avenue for rapid passage and national defense.
The commerce of the Atlantic as well as of the Pacific demands this inter-oceanic highway. A stream of traffic will pour direct from the great rivers and lakes on the one side to those on the other. The products of our country will find cheap transportation for interchange in all our markets, as well as more profitable shipment to the wider parts of the world. The mouth of the Columbia river, in a sense, will be extended to the gulf of Mexico, and the mouth of the Mississippi to the Pacific Ocean. Our people will become more closely related.
Our nation will become stronger at home and more heroic abroad. When such great undertakings have been accomplished, it can be said of all the achievements in our industrial development none will have contributed more to the material interests of our people than this world-tamed project. While extending our already vast commerce and dominion it will also contribute to the defense, the honor, and the glory of our beloved country, and be a memorial to American genius and American foresight and energy as long as this shall endure.
