Senator Simon Talks.

"I'm not going to change my opinion of public questions, just because I've been elected senator," said Senator Simon, laughingly to a reporter who sought an interview with him. "I don't think there is much doubt as to my position with reference to the important matters before the country."

He was assured, however, that the public had a keen interest in his views at this time, and that it would be glad to have a fresh recital even of an old story, since the developments of the past few days had given special significance to his utterances. He consented to talk freely and without evasion.

"Of course," said he, "the financial question was brought into a great prominence in Oregon in this campaign, because the politics of the state have been so curiously mixed in that important issue. I have always believed, since the subject has been occupying public attention, that the only 'sound money system' is that of the gold standard. The fight in this state having been within the republican party, as well as between the straight republicans and the adherents of all stripes of confessedly 'soft money' faiths, and the straight gold standard republicans having finally won such a magnificent victory, it was but natural that prominence should be given that question throughout the campaign that has just ended with my election. But it seems to me our gold-standard faith is coming to have a new significance. Important as it is as a policy of our international government, it has recently taken added importance by reason of the territorial expansion of the United States and the commercial relations thus brought to our consideration. Money, good, bad or indifferent, is important only for the uses to which it is or may be put. Our money, being the best money, it is sure to help us to permanent trade. It will not make so much difference to us whether the base of reckoning be New York or London, when money is reduced to common terms of trade that have a definite meaning everywhere. I hope to see the time when Portland will figure prominently in the exchanges of the world. If I do not greatly misread events beyond the Pacific, Portland has the greatest opportunity of its career to take a high place in commerce.

"I do not feel quite satisfied with the present condition of national finances. The nation is on a gold basis, it is true, but its position might, in my judgment, be improved. Our finances are all right for prosperous times; if adversity should come again, we might see great need for protecting the treasury as we have seen in the past. The retirement of the treasury notes, I think, would go along way in that direction. Possibly that would be a sufficient precaution for the present. I don't believe in leaving those things until we shall be threatened with disaster. Let us in time of prosperity take steps to ward off adversity.

"While I do not believe in a jingo policy I am still averse to our withdrawing within our national shell and refusing to take and hold our proper place in the affairs of the world. Of the two, I would choose to adopt the policy of England rather than of China. We cannot keep aloof from the world's great activities without suffering the penalty. We must as a nation take the responsibilities and advantages that come to us in the progress of events. It happens that the war with Spain has brought us very material territorial expansion. I believe we should accept it. In the constant struggle with barbarism which civilization is ever waging, we, as an enlightened people, must take part. The responsibility that comes with conquest of Spain's overripe colonies is great, and the advantage is also important. It is by no means a purely commercial transaction. In dollars and cents our territorial expansion may not be profitable for some time. It is our affair, and we should settle it in our way; and our way, I believe, is to insist on having the entire group of the Philippines, and the other possessions concerning which there is no question. In this matter I see no reason why we should consult any other nation. Spain is in no position, from the standpoint of either right or might, effectually to oppose our taking the legitimate fruits of war, especially of such a war. I think I should oppose the ratification of a treaty that should involve retention of Spanish sovereignty over any part of the Philippines. We can make them of vastly more use to the world and to ourselves than they are now, and we should and, I believe, will do it.

"It is not necessary for me to say that I favor the building and control of the Nicaragua canal by the United States government. The Pacific coast is deeply interested in that enterprise and if it should be completed within a few years it is possible this coast would at first experience a more direct benefit than any other part of the nation. But the Atlantic seaboard will need as short a cut as it can get to our new possessions in the pacific and to the growing trade at our disposal in the Japanese and Chinese empires, and the canal will be as much or more a necessity to the commerce of our Eastern states as to the Pacific states. It is not a sectional enterprise, but on in which the whole United States is interested.

"A cable to connect the United States with Hawaii has long been needed. With the acquisition of Spanish islands comes increased necessity for a submarine cable to bring our possessions into communication with each other and with the central seat of government. I believe the government should take some action that would result in the building of such a cable.

"I see clearly that the military establishment of the United States must be more extensive hereafter than it has been In fact, the standing army has long been rather small for safety. It has not kept pace with the growth of the country. I have no doubt that the army will be greatly increased to meet the new demands. Of course, the navy should be greatly increased. The magnificent record of our navy in the Spanish war leaves no doubt of the efficiency of that arm of the national defense. I have always favored liberal appropriations for building and equipping war vessels. I see very good reasons for favoring such action now, and am glad congress has already shown a willingness to put the American navy where it ought to be in comparison with the sea power of other nations.

The matter of coast defense should also be given more attention. In short, while we hope to maintain peaceable relations with the world, we should not be at the mercy of any nation at any time."

Indian War Veterans.

Following is the full text of the senate joint memorial relative to Indian war claims, which passed the house last Saturday.

"Resolved, By the senate, the house of representatives of the legislative assemble of Oregon concurring."

"To the Congress of the United States: We, your memorialists, respectfully represent that, during the years 1847 and 1848, and from 1850 to 1857, war was made upon the white settlers of the territories of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Northern California, which, though known as the Cayuse war of 1847 and 1848 and the Rogue river disturbances of 1851, 1852, 1853 and 1854, and the Yakima and Rogue river Indian wars of 1855 and 1856, respectively, was in fact a collusive effort on the part of all the Indian tribes of the North Pacific coast to exterminate the American settlements. During these dark days of the little colony on the coast, 1800 men, women and children were brutally murdered by these Indians. The territorial authorities called out a volunteer force, who, in the main, furnished their own horses, guns and ammunition. They were poorly clad and often went without food.

"Forty and 50 years have come and gone since these memorable struggles, in which over 400 battles were fought and the very existence of the early settlers was threatened. All told, some 4000, of these brave pioneers were at one time or another enlisted in defense of this land, and most of them have gone to their long home. The remnant, a relic of the past, are aged and infirm, and many of them poor and destitute.

"It is most unjust that the valor and sacrifices of these veterans, should be unrecognized by the general government, while these who fought in other Indian wars, have been paid as well as pensioned by the United States.

"Therefore in the name of justice and humanity, we plead for just recognition of the services of these worthy veterans, and we earnestly ask the honorable, the speaker and members of the house of representative of the United States, to pass at the next session of congress the bill which passed the United States senate during the second session of the 55th congress granting pensions to the veterans of the Indian wars above mentioned, and of other Indian wars designated in said senate bill. Their claim is a just one, and appeals to every patriotic citizen of America. This government never had more loyal citizens, truer, or more heroic and nobler defenders than these pioneers and veterans. Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the secretary of state be instructed to forward a copy of this memorial to our senators and representatives in congress, with the request, that they use every honorable means to secure the passage of said senate bill."

PAY OF REJECTED GUARDSMEN.

Probably a Month Will Elapse Before Warrants Are Issued.

It will probably be a month before any of the members of the Oregon National Guard who were rejected last May on account of physical defects, will receive pay from the state for attendance at Camp McKinley.

The bill making an appropriation, which passed the legislature at the special session, gives the National Guard 90 days in which to certify to names and time to the secretary of state. This official will draw a separate warrant for each man. Only those who had been mustered into the Oregon National Guard will receive pay, the volunteers who were not members of a company, not being considered.

Colonel B. B. Tuttle, adjutant-general for Oregon, will begin making out the rolls this week, and will send them promptly to the secretary of state; but it is altogether likely one month will elapse before the warrants can be drawn.

It would be well enough for all former members of the National Guard, who were rejected at Camp McKinley, to send their postoffice addresses to Colonel B. B. Tuttle. Otherwise the secretary of state, will not know where to mail the warrants.

When an innocent man is jailed by mistake he prefers to come out the same way he went in. He may break jail and be caught and put back again. He'd rather have the door unlocked and walk out and stay out.

A sick man is a prisoner in the jail of disease; he has gone in by some door of carelessness or neglect or irregular living, and he must unlock this same door by careful, sensible habits if he wants to be a free, well man again.

If dyspepsia and biliousness or constipation is the way he got into disease, he has got to overcome just those troubles before he can get out.

The majority of diseases begin with some trouble of the digestive organs or of the liver, which prevents the supply of proper nourishment to the system. The best remedy for these troubles is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, because it gives the digestive and blood-making organs power to assimilate food and transform it into pure, nourishing blood, vitalized with an abundance of red corpuscles.

It acts directly upon the liver and gives it capacity to filter all bilious impurities out of the circulation. It builds up solid, muscular flesh and healthy nerve-force.

In obstinate constipation the "Discovery" should be used in conjunction with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the most natural and thoroughly scientific laxative ever devised. The "Pellets" regulate and invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One is a gentle laxative; two act as a mild cathartic.

"My wife had suffered for seven years with dyspepsia, sick headache and costiveness," writes Mr. Alonzo D. Jameson, of Dunbarton, Merrimack Co., N. H., "we tried many doctors and many kinds of medicine, but all were of no avail. We purchased six bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which together with the 'Pleasant Pellets' has entirely restored my wife's health, and we cannot say enough in thanks to you for these valuable medicines."
