A boy does not have to be a duds and spend a small fortune to attend there, but gain the practical training and knowledge that earns a living for him afterward. Emil Barbe, of Jacksonville, an old and respected resident of Southern Oregon, died suddenly last Saturday morning. He had started out for a hunt with some other parties, and when out some distance complained of feeling unwell and told the boys he would return home. When they returned in the afternoon they found Mr. Barbe had not come home, when they retraced the trail and found the dead body where they had left him. The funeral occurred Monday at Jacksonville. Chaplain Gilbert, of the 2nd Oregon is a man whom one cannot meet without giving him the better part of his nature and many a soldier boy will live to bless him. A Salem volunteer writes: "Our officers don't give a whoop for us except to keep up their show of authority. If it hadn't been for the chaplain, we wouldn't have had any one on our side, but he will work just as hard as we can for anything that will benefit us. I don't know what we would have done about mail if he hadn't helped us by furnishing writing material, taking our mail out to the ships, making arrangements to have our mail brought in, etc. Old Uncle Sam is all right, but we have a heavy cross against Alger. The slop they threw into us for a while killed more men than the Spanish did." The time of the reappearance of the pumpkin pie is with us once more, and one of our exchanges says: "Whether the pumpkin pie was created for Thanksgiving, or Thanksgiving for the pumpkin pie, we know not, but the affinity between the two is quite evident. The pumpkin pie is of great sociological and patriotic interest. Social student and patriot are alike concerned with the question of the supply of great men, and the pumpkin pie is evidently a developer of greatness. Vermont fed Devey on pumpkin pie for 20 years. Behold the result! Who knows what might have been the outcome had Montezuma been an eater of pumpkin pie, and Dawey of olda podrida con aguardiente? Here's to the pumpkin pie! May its genial complexion pale not, nor its interior lose its fragrance as the years pass!"

Colonizing the Pacific States.

The Hollary colony located at Skagit county, Washington, is reported to be doing well, and a Mormon colony in Eastern Oregon is well under way, and is creating considerable comment. In speaking of the latter colony the Telegram says: This undertaking at La Grande is one of great interest and value, not only to that locality, but to the whole state of Oregon, and not only is it unfair to its promoters but it is injurious to the interests of the state to endeavor to prejudice the public mind against men who come into Oregon to prosecute important industrial enterprises on any religious grounds.
