"While the sailors were hanging in the rigging, expecting any moment to be swept to destruction, they got to bantering one another about their predicament. It was a unanimous vote that corn and barley brine is more digestible than that of Old Neptune."

The Wizard Oil Company is nightly drawing crowds to the Opera House. The company gives a big show for a little money (only 15 cents) and they make both friends and money. Go and see them once and you are sure to go again, and the beauty of it is you can take your entire family with you for less than you frequently pay to see an inferior performance. Every night this week at the Opera House.

In Janet Waldorf herself we have an actress, of the most consummate art. Youth, beauty, genius and vigor combined in one charming personality. Recognized as the peer of all her predecessors, she bids fair to outstrip them all and stand to future years as America's greatest actress. Her Juliet is now claimed to be the greatest living embodiment of Shakespeare's ill-starred heroine that ever trod the boards. Universal acclamations give to her Rosalind and her Julia the palm over many others of established fame; and yet her is a secret to this sudden success of hers. Years of hard unremitting study before her first appearance last year and what her personal friends call an absolute hunger for study. She is backed with a most excellent company, among them Wm. McVey, remembered by many as the late Margaret's Mother's Cymbeline, Norval McGregor, Allen Dunn, George Bernards, Ellen Boyer and several others more or less known to the West, completing a roster which is becoming known as one of the best balanced companies that ever came westward. That talented lady, Ada Dow Courier, associated in the mind of every eastern playgoer with many a grand production of the bard, personally superintends the stage production and the result is a series of perfect pictures, accurately and artistically costumed, complete in every detail, carrying the audience into the heart of Verona, Arden forest or Illyria, there to live with the medieval coloring and romance of those days showing in every line.

Critics seem to have exhausted their vocabularies in praising the lady and her support and should report count for anything we are to have a treat seldom equalled in the dramatic annals of our city. At Opera House Monday, Nov. 28. Prices 75, 50, 35, and 25c.

Drink the Cause.

A man by the name of H. C. Williams, a stranger in the city, was found dead in the back porch of the Eldorado saloon Tuesday morning. Coroner Hoover held an inquest over the remains that afternoon, and the following facts were extracted from the testimony: Deceased had been drinking freely during the day, was "pretty full" when he came to the Eldorado, about 6 o'clock, Monday evening. He continued drinking and during the evening wanted the bartender, Leo Minard, to cash a check for him. The check was for $18.35, drawn on the First National Bank, of Grants Pass and signed by John Kern. He endorsed the check, but so illegibly that Minard refused to cash it. Minard tried to obtain a bed for him at the hotel but was told there was no room for him, so he remained about the place until a late hour begging drinks from other inmates, until some one gave him a half-pint flask of whiskey which he finished at one draught and soon after fell to the floor. He was taken out on the back porch and left to sleep off his "jag." He was found there dead Tuesday morning. Following is the verdict of the coroner's jury:

We, the coroner's jury, empaneled by the coroner of Douglas County, Oregon, to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of deceased, that his name was, where and when he came to his death, after having been first duly sworn, say that we had deceased's name to be H. C. Williams, that he was formerly resident at Gold Hill, Jackson county, Oregon, that he was of the probable age of 34 years, that he died on the 22nd day of November, 1898, in the saloon of Thompson & Minard, in Roseburg, Douglas county, Oregon, and that his death was caused by the excessive use of alcoholic stimulants.

Obituary.

Julia A. Gilas was born in Pennsylvania September 16, 1816. She was married to Leonard Buell, March 17, 1836. They moved to Oregon in 1852, locating in Marion county, and in 1854 located in Douglas county, where they have since resided, with the exception of one year spent in California. In 1870 they located in Looking Glass valley, where she died November 11, 1898.

Grandma Buell was loved by all who knew her and especially by her family and neighbors, to whom her life was ever an example of Christian love and cheerfulness. So complete was her hope and trust in her Savior, that sentiment of her loved song cheered and comforted her last hours and she was ready to go to her reward.

Anywhere with Jesus I can go to sleep. When the darkening shadows round about me creep. Knowing I shall waken nevermore to roam, Anywhere with Jesus will be home, sweet home.

Mrs. Buell was the mother of 12 children, eight boys and four girls, with 61 grand children and 40 great-grand-children.

She leaves a husband 84 years of age, who has been her constant companion and helpmate for 63 years, also seven sons and two daughters to mourn their loss. She could well say: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

Baldwin Hotel Burned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—At 3:25 this morning the Baldwin hotel caught fire and was entirely destroyed. There were 800 people, guests and employes, in the hotel when the fire broke out, and certainly two, probably many more of these people, lost their lives. Manager A. J. White was one of the victims, but before he gave up his life the gallant fellow saved the lives of three women.

The death of White was most dramatic. Three women appeared on a cornice of the fifth floor on the Market-street side of the hotel. The firemen could not reach them with ladders and they stood helplessly, screaming with terror. Suddenly White came out of the window carrying a small rope. With this he lowered the women into the arms of the firemen who were waiting at the windows of the next story. Then White started down the rope hand over hand. When he was half way down, the rope parted, and the man who had just saved three lives was dashed to death on the pavement, one hundred feet below.
