An Expired Fallacy.

It was the idea when we first began to manufacture big guns that the larger ones were good for only a certain number of firings, and that then it was not safe to use them. But our American guns have proved the fallacy of this supposition. The guns on foreign ships have worn out in times past, and it was supposed that ours might do the same when used too much. But such has not been the case. Nearly all our big guns have been fired more than one hundred times, and none of them have yet shown any sign of weakness. This shows that the guns manufactured in the United States are of a better quality. The manufacturers here surmounted the defect of the European guns, and 15-inch guns are now found to be as capable of frequent firing as the guns of smaller calibre.

Building a Face.

The surgeons connected with St. Catherine's hospital, in the borough of Brooklyn, have in prospect a task which is likely to attract world-wide attention. John Wagonblast, a few days ago, while carefully handling a shotgun, blew off the front and left side of his face. The doctors are planning to build him an artificial face by what is known as plastic surgery. The work will be in charge of Dr. J. C. Kennedy, visiting surgeon at the hospital, and Dr. James S. Stavin, the house surgeon. Surgeon Stavin says:

"The first step will be to replace the nose by one of rubber or celluloid. We shall draw up the skin on either side of the new nose so that it will slightly overlap the edge. The cheek beyond the nose over the eye will be replaced by plates of silver or platinum. We hope to be able to use the old roof of the mouth without any plates and to save the teeth. When once we can get the nose and plate in place, and the process of healing has advanced we will begin grafting skin on the bare surface. The skin we will take from the man's thighs. It will require a long time and much patience on the part of the suffering man, but we hope to make a respectable job of him before we are through. The last step will be to replace the lost eye with one of glass."
