Want to Come Home.

Private L. M. Travis, of Eugene who recently returned from Manila, came down to Portland Saturday to witness the football game, and have his furlough extended. It is his intention to apply for a discharge when this extension expires, if he has not fully recovered his health, as he has no desire to try Manila any more.

"Nearly all of the boys want to come home," he said in conversation with some friends yesterday, "and I am sure I have in mind several who will die of nothing but 'homesickness' if they have to remain there much longer.

"It is unneccessary for me to tell about the life the boys lead there. I have already told of it, and it has been told by others who have returned, but it is not a picnic, and that's one reason why it goes so hard with many of the boys.

"When they left home the pretty girls were kissing and cheering them, and showering bouquets on them, and many of them concluded that a soldier's life was about the 'softest' thing they had ever tried. Over in Manila there are no pretty girls coming round with kisses and flowers, and soldier life is entirely a different thing.

"I sincerely hope the volunteers will all soon be sent home, and as regulars are now being sent there it looks as if they would.—Telegram.

The Filipino Press.

MANILA, Dec. 7.— The native press continues to advocate the independence and reimbursement to the United States government of the amount to be paid Spain for the Philippines. The Independencia thinks this course the only just one. It insists that the Filipinos have aided the Americans solely because they believed they were fighting for independence. The paper quotes liberally from President McKinley's last speech in Chicago to support its contention that the Americans are pledged to give the Filipinos independence.

The United States transport Newport, bearing General Miller and staff and the First battalion, Twentieth Kansas regiment, with the Wyoming light battery, which left San Francisco November 8, arrived today, closely following the City of Puebla, which arrived yesterday with Lieutenant-Colonel Childers, 25 officers and 600 men, including five companies of the First Tennessee, troop A, of the Nevada volunteer cavalry, a detachment of recruits for the Twenty-third infantry and a detachment for the California heavy artillery.

Royalty in the Saddle.

The recent falls from horseback of Emperor William of Germany and of the Duke of Connaught, serve to call attention to the fact that whatever equestrianism there is among the reigning families of Europe seems to be restricted to the ladies. All the sons of Queen Victoria ride ungracefully and are indebted to a Hessian of the name of Meyer, of Darmstadt, for their German seat in the saddle.

King Humbert has been thrown off his horse more often than any other royal personage in christendom. The late czar was a bad rider, and it was some uncomplimentary comment in relation to his riding made by Emperor William, and carefully repeated at the court af St. Petersburg, which was the origin of no end of bitterness between the two monarchs. The obesity of the king at Portugal renders him awkward on horseback. The king of Sweden and his sons are all indifferent horsemen, as is also the present czar, while King George of Greece and his father, King Christian of Denmark, prefer walking to every kind of exercise.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria is unable to remain in the saddle for more than half an hour at a time. The Duke of Orleans, as well as Prince Victor Bonaparte, have recently damaged their pretensions to the French throne by their ridiculous falls from horseback and King Alexander of Servia is so frightfully short sighted that it is impossible for him to ride any save the most carefully trained horses.

In fact, the only male royal riders in Europe who have really fine seats in the saddle, and who are fine riders in every sense of the word, are the old emperor of Austria and King Leopold of Belgium the latter owing his cleverness as a horseman to the fact that he was taught by Englishmen.
