Last Saturday evening Nellie Willis Buchanan gave a pleasant entertainment, for the pupils of her music class and invited friends, at her residence on Mill street. Her string band, calling themselves the "Silent Thirty," rendered a few selections from Mozart, Verdi and some of the popular music of the day, after which a luncheon was served. All spent a very pleasant evening.

William Jordan, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, disappeared a week ago today, and has not yet been seen or heard from since. It is supposed that he committed suicide by drowning in the river. He had told the commandant that he was tired of living, and had threatened to drown himself. He was a member of the Fourth Battalion Maine Light Artillery, and had been gardening in East Portland for the past eight or ten years.

A serious accident occurred on the railroad north of Yoncalla early Saturday morning. A train No. 32, south-bound, reached the foot of Rice Hill the engine came uncoupled from the tender. The shock threw Fireman E. A. Anderson, who was throwing in wood at the time, between the engine and tender, and the engineer checking his engine suddenly Anderson's left arm was caught between the two and badly crushed. He was brought on to Roseburg and reached here in time to take the overland for Portland, accompanied by Dr. Twitchell, where he was treated. His arm was amputated, but he died this morning.

Hon. A. M. Crawford went to Salem this morning, on legal business, to be gone for two or three days.

Death of a Pioneer.
Stockley L. Jones, of Marion county, died yesterday morning at 7 o'clock. Mr. Jones was one of the old settlers of the valley, and was well known and esteemed among all the farmers, and many others who knew him. He was born in Kentucky, in the year 1812, and came to Oregon as a pioneer in the early part of 1850, and settled down on the homestead where he died, near Champeop, in Marion county. He left a large family of children to mourn his loss, among them being Mrs. Dattas of Roseburg; Mrs. Forsyth of St. Paul; Mrs. Osborne of Champeop; Mrs. Illig of Hubbard; two sons living in the Valley, and Mrs. Sarah F. Kirker of Portland.

A Delightful Time.
On Friday last there was an unusual pleasant gathering at the old Masonic Hall, it being the regular meeting of Abraham Lincoln, Circle No. 2, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, and all who came knew that the officers were to be installed and all expected a very pleasant time and none went away disappointed. The installing officer was Hon. J. W. Wright of this city, who conducted the service with a great deal of dignity, precision and pleasantry and covered himself with glory as with a mantle. Truly official dignity rests very gracefully upon his manly brow.

The officers installed were: Mrs. Anna McCoy, Pres.; Mrs. Belle Frater, S. V. Pres.; Mrs. A. L. Kidder, J. V. Pres.; Mrs. Martha Perry, chaplain; Mrs. J. G. Flook, Treas.; Miss Daisy Frater, Sec.; Mrs. Wiley, Con.; Mrs. Helvies, guard.

After the ceremonies were concluded an elegant lunch was served by the ladies of the circle, who know so well how to perform this delicate task and make it pleasant for everybody. So for an hour or two the time was delightfully spent in eating and drinking, in pleasant converse and in music. There were several solos by Comrade Wright, duets by some of the young ladies and many full choruses. All were loathe to depart, but the time came at last, and we went away wishing that the Ladies of the G. A. R. would entertain more frequently.

Will Succeed In Time.
The minister of instruction at St. Petersburg has presented a scheme to the council of state in favor of permitting women to practice medicine. This is the third or fourth attempt of the kind; but, as in the present instance it is strongly supported, it appears to have a chance of success.

CHARGES AGAINST KINCAID.

Alleges That He Has Worked the Office of Secretary of State to the Limit.

(From A. H. correspondence to Friday's Oregonian.)

Since the opening day of the legislative session there has been current about the lobbies at the statehouse a good deal of guarded criticism of the recent administration of the office of the secretary of state; and since the publication in this morning's Oregonian of Secretary Dunbar's letter, announcing a change in the policy of the office in the matter of deeds issued by the state, the talk has taken a louder tone. In the matter of state deeds alone it is said that during his official term of four years the late secretary received and pocketed several thousands of dollars from purchasers of land in the form of fees, illegally exacted. It is also said that he has made a practice of exacting fees in considerable sums for filing foreign articles of incorporation, a duty of his office for which no special compensation is provided by law. Another charge is that in the matter of supplying certified copies of new laws previous to their official publication, he has employed clerks at the expense of the state, himself pocketing the enormous fees flowing in for this work. Coming down to petty matters, it is alleged that he has exacted from releasing convicts $2 out of the state's gift of $5 to every discharged man so that he may not be returned to the world penitentiary—for certifying to their papers of discharge. The service in each of these classes of instances is a mere turn of the wrist, done for the most part by clerks under state pay.

AN AMAZING TRANSACTION.
Yesterday it was reported that shortly before retiring from office the ex-secretary paid himself $90 from the state's treasury on account of an alleged subscription to the Eugene Journal—his own paper—covering the period from 1864 to October 25, 1898. I went this morning to the office of the secretary of state, and asked if there was a record of any such transaction. After a little search it was found, and I give herewith a copy of the voucher as sworn to and accepted:

THE STATE OF OREGON.
1898. To H. R. Kincaid, Dr.
Oct. 25—For subscription to the Oregon State Journal from March 12, 1894, to October 25, 1898—34 years, 7 months, 3 days:
First five years, at $1.00 per copy, $50.00
Next 20 years, at $3.00 per copy, 60.00
Last 10 years, 7 months, 13 days, at 25.00
Less reduction on listed rate, 16.50
Total amount allowed, $99.00
I, H. R. Kincaid, being first duly sworn, depose and say upon oath that the foregoing account is correct and just; that the papers therein specified were furnished to the state of Oregon as stated; that the charge therefor is reasonable and less than my regular subscription rate; and that no part thereof has been heretofore paid.

I, H. R. KINCAID, Subscribed and sworn to before me this... day of... A. D. 189...

Notary Public for Oregon.
Received from H. R. Kincaid, secretary of state, warrant No. 10174, in payment of the above account.

H. B. KINCAID, Accompanying this voucher and filed with it as part of the official record, is an official opinion from the then attorney-general, C. M. Idleman:

Your communication, accompanied by your claim of $90 for "State Journal" (newspaper) furnished the state library since 1864, and requesting my opinion upon your legal right to draw warrant in payment of same, is before me. There is but one legal proposition to be considered, viz:

Has this claim or any part thereof been barred by the statute of limitation? There can be no question in my mind, as the account runs from year to year, that the portion accruing six years immediately preceding its presentation would be barred, but there is a maxim coequal with the law in age and accuracy to the effect that the statute of limitation never bars against an honest man; neither will I invoke it nor permit the state to do so, if within my power, when this is the only technical defense that can be interposed.

The attorney-general's letter proceeds in some lines of further glittering claptrap about "moral responsibility of the state" and the "conscience of the individual," and ends with a repetition of the assurance that "the defense of the statute of limitation shall not and will not be interposed." Upon the basis of this letter, which in so many direct words declares all that part of the claim accruing prior to six years before presentation illegal, the secretary in his character of state officer issued to himself in his character of publisher a state warrant for $90. If this was an honest debt, why was its collection so long postponed? Why was collection enforced while the claimant was himself the auditor?

There are other stories afloat as to the ex-secretary's habit of thrift—one to the effect that during the first two days of Secretary Dunbar's incumbency—Monday and Tuesday of this week—the ex-secretary received the morning's official mail, abstracted from it its remittance of fees—something like $90 for the two days—and turned the letters over for record to the clerical staff of the office. I asked Secretary Dunbar if this was so. He hesitated, manifestly not wishing to mix in a scandal, finally answering: "It is true."

I will not burden this dispatch with further details of stories afloat as to other transactions similar in kind. Enough has been set forth to indicate what has been the spirit and habit of the office during the recent term. I leave the public to draw its own conclusions. The emoluments of the secretaryship, when only legitimate fees are reckoned, are unreasonably and absurdly large. Other secretaries, while limiting themselves to what the law and to what official decency allowed them, have drawn far more than should be paid to a secretary of state. None of them, however, has "worked" the schemes of aggrandizement above suggested.

The legislature is now in session, with abundant time on its hands. It is a good time for an inquiry which will either convict Mr. Kincaid of grave improprieties or shut the mouths which are now busy in criticism of his official acts.

John Walton and the Indians.
Six savages started upon the war path, all gaudily painted with ochre and clay. For months they had brooded and rattled their wrath, till now they determined a pale-face to slay.

Then off to the settlement quickly they rode, on tough little ponies so wiry and stout. A bottle of fire-water each of them stored.

To keep him from losing his courage, no doubt. Old farmer John Walton was splitting a log. A big knotty oak stick, with mallet and wedge. When, roused at the baking and growls of his dog.

Six Indians he saw coming over the hedge. They quickly surrounded him, pulled at his hair. They plucked out his beard and they tweaked his long nose; Their tomahawk's wildly they brained in air. And danced in delight as they bent their long bows.

"Prepare for the torture," the big chief said, "This day I have sworn it, the pale-face must die."

"All right," Walton said. "But before I am dead, a favor I'll ask, which you must not deny."

If I should go hence without splitting this log. To the far happy hunting grounds, home of the good, No better I'd be than my horse or my dog.

"Unhappy I'd be in the prairie or wood. He cannot feel pleasure nor happiness there. Who leaves incomplete what he undertakes here; I'd find there no pleasure in hunting the bear. No pleasure I'd take in the chase of the deer."

"I must finish this task," "We'll wait," said the chief. Completes it, we ask not condition nor pledge. The Indians were pleased with John Walton's belief. And gravely they watched as he hammered the wedge.

Becoming impatient, the splitting was slow. They offered their services, wildly they spoke. And three on each side kneeling, three in a row, Grasping firmly the edge of the opening log.

"Now pull," yelled John Walton, and manfully all Leaned backward, all eager the word to obey; A powerful stroke on its side, with the maul, Sent the hard wedge a-flying some two rods away.

A fierce yell of rage from 'six dusky throats rose. A deep roar of pain, their credulity's price, As the lips of the caken log instantly closed.

Enclosing their hands in its clasp, like a vice. They begged and they prayed, and they promised in vain, A pale-face no more would they kill nor surprise.

A practical man was John Walton, and plain, Said he, "Your dead Indians never tell lies." In death were soon sleeping those terrible men. Who rode forth so gaily that beautiful day; A famous old warrior was Walton since then. And lived unmolested thereafter, they say.

Bar to Bigamy.
"Boys," said a teacher in a Sunday school, "can any of you quote a verse from Scripture to prove that it is wrong for a man to have two wives?" He paused, and after a moment or two a bright boy raised his hand. "Well, Thomas," said the teacher encouragingly, "Thomas stood up and said, 'No man can serve two masters.' The question ended there."—Boston Herald Journal.

The weather has moderated but still it rains. Mr. John Chaney, Sr., made Mr. H. H. Gidney a pleasant visit last Tuesday. The quilting party of last Wednesday, at Mrs. C. M. Raymond's, was quite largely attended.

Our teacher, Mr. Blundell, made his appearance last Monday morning, and school opened at the usual hour. We learn that Mr. David Fate met with a very serious accident last Tuesday. His horse became frightened and ran, throwing him out of the cart, and cutting his head badly.

The house of John Weaver, was broken into and robbed last Wednesday night a week ago. Bkx.

Notice to Contractors.
Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the board of trustees, of the Oregon Soldiers' Home at Roseburg, Oregon, until 12 m. Jan. 28, 1899, for the construction of a chapel and laundry for said Home, and in accordance with the drawings and writings of Lionel D. Denne, architect, 430 Chamber of Commerce, Portland, Oregon. Drawings on view at the office of Mr. Sol Abraham, Roseburg, Oregon, and the architect above named.

All tenders to be accompanied by a certified check for five (5) per cent of the order of the board of trustees, as an evidence of good faith. Board reserves the right to reject any and all tenders. H. H. Northrop, President.

No "New Women" in Germany.
It is wondered at that some of these 20 universities are not open to women. This is because the German women do not want to be educated, and the men, further, do not desire them to be. There has been a movement lately to make some of these institutions co-educational. There are at present four women at Berlin who have obtained permission to hear the lectures with men. Two of these are Frenchwomen, one from Finland and one a Vassar girl from America. At Göttingen there are at the lectures about a dozen American girls.—Berlin Letter in Philadelphia Telegraph.

Another Revolution in Hats.
The latest hats are not perched on the extreme back of the head as they have been about to glide off backward. On the contrary, in the present headgear the pendulum has swung to the opposite extreme, and the dainty little confections of lace and jet are tipped down over the eyes. Even theater bonnets are to be worn in this way—till a newer fancy strikes the maids and matrons who wear them.—Fashion Journal.

Thirty-Seven Years Ago.
From The Morning Oregonian of Jan. 12, 1862.

The following most beautiful lines in memory of Edward D. Baker, were written by a young lady of Salem, and recited by Miss Clara Watt, at a public meeting of the Young Ladies' Literary Society of the Wallamut university. We copy them from the Pacific Christian Advocate:
