First Local Elocutionary Contest.

Last Saturday the members of the Freshman class, competing for class honors, were greeted by a large audience of interested spectators. There were five contestants as follows:

Messrs. Warren Burt, Arthur Burt and Benj. Huntington, and Misses Emma Mulkey and Mary Hefty.

The program will set with music, furnished more than an hour's entertainment. The speakers made very creditable efforts for the training which they had had, and the evening's exercises showed that there is good recitative talent in the school that only needs development to make it first class. The judges were Mrs. Low, E. Rhodes and L. Applegate.

Benj. Huntington received the highest mark. Miss Mulkey was a close second, being only three points behind. There were those who thought that she should have had first place, but all had agreed to abide kindly by the report of those who should study the speakers' efforts with regard to the following points:

1—Position and attitude of the speaker, including the general bearing of and control of its members and composure.

2—Voice of the speaker, including smoothness, richness and the proper handling of the same in matters of pitch and loudness to correspond with the sentiment of the piece.

3—Movement and animation, including the different and proper degree of rapidity, and element of life-likeness with which the various sentiments are rendered.

4—Pronunciation, including correctness and clearness of articulation and distinctness of utterance together with a proper regard for the mnemonic value of words and the avoidance of objectionable elisions and slurs.

5—Gesture, including any bodily attitudes or facial expressions, applied by the speaker for the purpose of vivifying the word picturing of the selection, together with their suitableness to the piece and the ease and control of such gestures.

The best curfew ordinance says a respectable head of a full grown family is the one that is adopted at each fireside where the old man acts as mayor and council, nightwatch and calaboose keeper, and where fine and punishment go together and where a good hickory is more to be feared than so much jolly pop.

Some one wanted to know the opinion of a farmer on the question: "Is marriage a failure?" His reply was: "I should say not. Why Lucindy gets up in the morning, milks the cows, gets breakfast, starts four children to school, looks after three others, feeds the calves and pigs, takes the milk, washes the clothes, gets the dinner and does lots of other work. Think I could hire any body to do it for what she gets? Not much! Marriage is a grand success sir, a grand success."
