More About Boats.

It has been generally known for a number of years that Western Oregon is well adapted for the raising of Angora goats, and the climate, rainfall and pasturage form the combination for the production of the finest grades of mohair.

That this is a paying industry needs no further proof than the returning to those who have been successful in the goat business in the Willamette valley during the last few years. Below we give extracts from a letter from the Stanford Mills, Maine, to Mr. Geo. A. Honck:

"I am pleased to hear of your success in Oregon, and hope more people will go into the growing of mohair in that state, as the climate and feed seem so well adapted for mohair in that section of the country. This country should grow enough to keep up with the demand and keep our money on this side of the Atlantic, instead of sending it to Turkey. We have placed orders in Constantinople for 1500 bales of foreign mohair. This will keep us going until the new domestic clip comes on the market next spring."

Now regarding the price of mohair, our goods are sold through the large wholesale or jobbing houses, we do not sell any mohair direct from the mill to the retailer, and as we make 20¢ or 30¢ different qualities, I could not name a price unless I had a sample to see the quality. Those long pile fancy squares and rugs are something new, and have not been shown in the market yet; another year we expect to have them in for sale but could not fill orders this season. The wholesale price of our plush runs from 75 cents to $1.50 per yard, according to the quality; at retail, the price would be much higher. I thought the samples we sent you would be a drawing card, they will always command attention."—Corvallis Gazette.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Tragic Fate of Otis Whitmore Near Laurel. Hillsboro, Or., Oct. 23.—Otis Whitmore, who resided near Laurel, was yesterday accidentally shot and killed at a point near Laurel and Newberg. Whitmore and his brother-in-law, a man named Ornduff, were hunting. A grouse flew up, and Whitmore fired at it without effect. Ornduff then fired and brought down the bird. Whitmore then started to pick up the bird, and Ornduff was in the act of reloading his gun, when the weapon discharged, and the load of shot struck Whitmore in the back, completely shattering the left lung.

Medical aid was summoned from Newberg and Hillsboro, but all efforts to save the life of the unfortunate man were unavailing, as he soon expired. Whitmore was 30 years of age. He leaves a wife and three children. He was sober and industrious and his death is generally deplored.
