

line was wiped out forever and the patriotism and the genius of Grant and the valor and heroism of Lee became the common heritage of the American people.

And who in all Oregon will, or ever can, forget the day when our own boys made that memorable charge across the field of Malabon and wrote their own names and that of Oregon in letters of living light high, high on the cycloping temple of fame? Shall it be said that we willingly part with the soil which their bravery and their blood and their lives have rendered forever sacred? No. The day will never come when the people of Oregon will support that proposition.
