DOES GETTING MILLIONS PAY?

J. Pierpont Morgan has made within the last 12 or 15 years, a couple of hundred million dollars.

Nearly everybody says that J. Pierpont is the most successful man, possibly barring John D. Rockefeller and Andy Carnegie, that this country has ever seen, or for that matter, any other country. In some respects Pierpont is a good deal bigger man than either John or Andy. He seems to be able not only to dictate to Wall Street on this side of the waters, but he is also able to make financiers, princes and potentates on the other side dance to his music.

Experience, although a severe and an expensive teacher, there are those who refuse to profit by the wisdom thus dearly bought. Old Uncle Cy, of the Drain Nonpartisan, is still laboriously threshing over the chaff of the late campaign. The expression of the level-headed voters of Douglas county was too emphatic at the polls last June to doubt or question their position on local campaign issues.

The papers generally have been giving the reward for the capture of Tracy as $8,000. As a matter of fact the reward is as follows: State of Oregon $1,500, state of Washington $2,500, brother of Guard Farrell $100. Total reward $4,100. By the time this is secured each man who secures a slice will hardly have enough to pay for his powder.

The Drain Nonpartisan is trying to revive some old overworked local campaign issues. Why not also take up the equally live issue of Willie Bryan and free coinage? Asten to one. Your opposition worked wonders last June, Uncle Cy! May the good work go on unabated.

TRACEY LAST STAND.

Body Nearly Stripped of Clothing by Relic Seekers. Remains Taken to Salem.

Harry Tracey spent the final hours of his life at the farm house of Farmer Eddy near Creston, where he took things easily for nearly two days. Tuesday a young man named Goldfinch arrived and was kept there until evening, when he was permitted to go on pain of death if he divulged Tracey's presence there. He spread the news, and a posse made up of Creston, consisting of Deputy Sheriff C. A. Straub, Dr. E. C. Lanter, Lawyer Maurice Smith and J. J. Morrison, a railway section foreman, were soon at the place.

Farmer Eddy was moving, and Tracey came out of the barn. "Is that Tracey?" he asked. "It surely is," responded Eddy. Eddy went to the barn with his horses and Tracey assisted him in unloading them when he discovered the men. He made Eddy get in front of him as he fled into the barn. He secured his rifle and reappearing began firing as he fled down the valley, the men firing as he ran. Then he sprang behind a rock and fired eight shots in rapid succession at the men, none taking effect. He retraced from this position and sprang into a wheat field stumbling as he did so and then crawling forward. Shortly afterwards a shot was heard fired. This was just at dark Tuesday night. The shot fired was the one which ended the great outlaw's life. Sheriff Cochrane and party now arrived and the field was surrounded and a watch kept until morning, when an advance was made and Tracey's body found, face down. He had shot himself with a 45 caliber Colt's revolver, the bullet entering the forehead.

There were two bullet wounds on the left leg where the posse had hit him after he had fled from the rock, one had broken the leg between the ankle and the knee and the other had cut the tibia artery, which would have caused death. The outlaw accepted the situation and ended his career himself, rather than be captured.

The four men of the Straub posse claim the reward of $4,100 on his life, but it is probable the Gardner posse will also split in a claim to part of it.

DAVENPORT, WASH., Aug. 7.—When Sheriff Gardner and his posse arrived here yesterday with the outlaw's remains the whole town went wild. "Hurrah for Lincoln County!" was the cry, and it was with great difficulty that the crowds were forced enough to admit the passage of the body into the morgue. Insistent demands to see the remains were made by the people, and after a time many were admitted. Then the trouble started. Relic hunters were everywhere, and within ten minutes the corpse was almost entirely stripped. His clothes were cut off, the bloody cloth with which he had tried to staunch his wounds, and the strap he had used as a ligature were all carried away and even the head of the dead man was almost entirely shorn of hair. Great indignation has been expressed over the outrage, and it is not unlikely that some prosecutions will follow.

SEATTLE, Aug. 8.—The body of Harry Tracey, the Oregon convict who met his doom at the hands of an Eastern Washington posse, arrived here this morning at 11 o'clock in charge of Constable C. A. Straub, Sheriff and Dr. Lanter, three of the men who participated in the closing fight of his turbulent career.

When the train arrived at the depot a large crowd had gathered hoping to have a view of the body, but their curiosity was doomed to disappointment, the coffin being at once sealed up in the freight cars. No one was allowed to see the remains, which was said to have been almost stripped of clothing and hair by relic hunters east of the mountains.

TRACEY'S REMAINS.
SALEM, Aug. 9.—The last act in the prison tragedy which was inaugurated on the morning of June 9th, two months ago today, was had this afternoon when the remains of Harry Tracey, eight times murderer and principal actor in the tragedy, were laid away in the prison cemetery after a complete identification by the officers of the prison and the convicts generally. The body was received on the U. S. Southern Pacific train and taken in charge by Superintendent Lee, of the prison, who immediately sent the box to the prison by trustees. The three Washington men accompanied the remains and Mr. Lee followed in a cab. When they arrived at the prison the coffin was taken into the trunk's room, opened, and the body at once positively identified by Superintendent Lee, Ward E. James, the other officers and all the thirty prisoners as that of Tracey. The body was in a good state of preservation though the face was slightly discolored and there was a jagged hole over the right eye, where the convict's revolver bullet had entered the head. Efforts had been made to sew up the hole before the body was embalmed. After the identification by the officers the box was transferred to the chapel of the prison and the convicts were passed by and allowed to see the remains of their former fellow prisoner and fellow worker.

At 2 P. M. a trial was placed on the table to destroy it and thereby prevent any attempt at stealing the remains for exhibition purposes. The body was then taken to a grave already prepared, without ceremony.

Tracey's famous 30-30 Winchester rifle was brought by Constable Straub and delivered to Superintendent Lee. The weapon received almost as much attention as did the dead convict.
