

..Generous Uncle Bill..

Gives Friendly Advice to His Newly Married Niece Who Will Live Here

In a remote hamlet back East lived a deacon maiden and a bashful young man, who had for some years been living with but one and the same object. They were both hopeless victims of "love microbes" that were doing most effective work under the direction of Cupid himself. Harry suddenly "woke up" and decided that procreation was the chief of time-and-bliss-and immediately set about to bring matters to a focus. "Hettie my I—I—er, er—I—er—but he took a leader over hisfulness—"again would you—oo—er?" This time Hettie came to his rescue with a sweet "Yes, Harry dear, or—er I've been trying to say yes all this time, and I mean it too, if, er, you do," and to this day Harry insists that he popped the question.

Very soon there was a wedding and it was not much longer before Uncle Bill Taylor, of Roseburg, wrote effusively of what he termed her "girl" and proposed that they would locate here he would start them up in life. Very soon they began to live in the direction of matrimony and were soon speeding in this direction.

When the train pulled in, generous Uncle Bill was at the depot to greet and welcome the much elated couple, and after hearty congratulations, conducted them straightway to the McCallen Hotel, having previously arranged for a splendid suite, with Billy Schmidt the suave and alert host. It was here that the cheerful and inviting dining room of the hotel at breakfast next morning, while partaking of a tempting menu that was being politely served, Uncle Bill first unfolded his plans to the appreciative new couple, obligating himself first of all to build and furnish for them an ideal American home. "But in the meantime," said he, "you will find this pleasant, home like and most agreeable place to live."

After breakfast the anxious new couple, at Uncle Bill's request, accompanied him about town with a view to getting acquainted and arranging in detail all the matters incidental to building and furnishing the new home. "And now for a desirable spot" said Uncle Bill, "to build on, let's go in and confer with Gardner & Dillard, our well informed and wide-awake real estate agents, where is listed the best property in town and country about." The trio were cordially received and it wasn't long before the courtly Messrs. Gardner & Dillard had said Uncle Bill charming and commodious residence site.

"In erecting a home, one, perhaps to be left as a tribute of family pride to succeeding generations. It is absolutely important to use only A-1 lumber and building material, otherwise in a decade or so the building would topple over," said Uncle Bill, with an assured air. "I will avoid this dilemma. I will arrange with J. B. Byers, mgr. of Leona Mill Lumber company about the lumber and interior finish and the sundry articles. The yards and shops are always filled with pine and fir lumber of all kinds and dimensions, and the manifold things needed in the construction of buildings in these later days, adequate to meet the demands of trade."

Now since Uncle Bill's first gift to his newly married niece was a pretensions new residence and possessing but a vague idea as to what would be imposing, commodious, and acceptable, he suddenly remembered E. F. Patterson, commonly known as "Pat," as being conversant with architecture and in close touch with the building interests here, who, after Uncle Bill had made known the object of his visit, soon arranged about the plans for a most modern residence. Uncle Bill then and there also awarded Mr. Patterson the contract to build it, remarking that nobody ever questioned his integrity or ability in executing a contract to the letter, and on time, too.

"Now that our splendid new residence will soon be ready to move into we'll next take steps about furnishing it out in good shape. It will be my aim to have it fit excellence," ventured Uncle Bill, "so if you join me we'll go and talk it over with Rice & Rice our well informed house furnishers and diligent exponents of furniture." The trio were courteously received at the store and after the anxious management, had made some suggestions to the antlers bride, she soon selected her parlor, chamber and bedroom suites, and other requisites in furnishing for the new home, no outcrying were the smart and unique effects comprised in the store. Hence Uncle Bill ordered Rice & Rice to furnish it "out and out" from top to bottom, to have it ship and span in every particular. The bride was assured that no pains or effort would be spared to have the home look in all respects.

"Oh, yes, Uncle, I will take it for a drive." "Yes, yes, I was, and I'll keep my word too." Just then a pair of spirited steeds attached to a substantial and attractive surry, with fine strappings very apparent, drew up in front of the hotel. "That rig came from E. F. Rogers' stables," remarked Uncle Bill, as he looked it over, "our stables, and well known liveryman here. It is a well ordered livery, feed and veterinary stable, commodious with every comfort for 'man's best friend,' where is kept good vehicles for all uses and good horses, too, including some high speeders; it is this kind of business effort that has brought Mr. Rogers in good standing with the public."

"Why don't you surprise your wife with a nice fruit cake, since you are going to have company next week," says Uncle Bill, "I would," says Harry, "but can you buy a fruit cake here at a livery stable?" "Ah go on," says Uncle Bill, "it's at the Umpqua Bakery that they make such delicious and wholesome cakes, pies and bread, which is the staff of life. "Where is the Umpqua Bakery," they everybody knows where that bakery is. Let's go and get a pie. I can eat a whole one, I am with you says Harry, so can I. They then made a bee line for the bakery, where Mrs. Freeman, one of the congenial proprietors, extended them the hospitality she is so capable of, and on leaving they both vowed they would always go to Jennings & Freemans Umpqua bakery, for the best Bakers goods in Roseburg.

Shortly after leaving the hotel for a shopping tour, Hettie asked to be directed to a millinery store, "you just mentioned it in time," rejoined Uncle Bill, who led the way into The Bell Sisters' inviting millinery parlors, where the same new effects appear simultaneously with Paris and metropolitan American cities. So zealously does the accomplished milliners, Bell Sisters, guard the interest of her clientele. The attractive lines of millinery were so tasty and dainty that Hettie soon embarked to an exquisite hat adding many articles in ladies fancy goods before concluding her purchases.

Of course you always want to patronize a good mechanic, so in the Harness and Saddlery line always go to T. L. Blodgett, 415 Jackson street. He is an artisan, and for fine harness making and repairing, he is the boss. All his work is hand made and reliable, and you can get anything in the leather and horse goods line, from a curry comb to a Texas Saddle. Did you notice the harness on that pair of horses, that just went by? They were made by Mr. Blodgett. Everyone who wants reliable harness, gets them there.

Uncle Bill, why did you give that man your watch? said Harry. Did you sell it to him? No I did not. That was R. F. Winslow, the leading Jeweler and Optician, of Roseburg. I just gave him the watch to fix it. He does all my work, and he is a reliable jeweler to deal with too. He has the finest stock of watches, clocks and jewelry in the city, and it will pay you to patronize him when you need anything in his line.

On the way to the hotel Uncle Bill was relating to Harry the experience of his last deer hunt, to which Harry replied: "Uncle I am good with the rifle myself." So they entered Jim Hopkins' prize shooting gallery, where they spent some time shooting for a gold watch which Mr. Hopkins offers every week to the one making the highest score; and then they tried throwing at the babies for cigars. At this Uncle Bill best Harry. Perhaps because he had had more experience at hitting children, having raised a large family of his own.

Uncle Bill since we have had such a good time, I don't like to go home without taking something home for Hettie. Then said Uncle Bill we will go to Wood & Bell's Candy Kitchen and get her a nice box of homemade candies. Their goods are always fresh and good, and they make them every day. And while they were buying the candy for Hettie, Harry espied a sign, reading, "Hot Soda" and of course proposed to treat Uncle Bill to a glass, which they both agreed was excellent and concluded to bring Hettie up for one, as they had nice, private boxes for ladies.

With the exception of a piano our new home is complete," said Hettie to Uncle Bill. "Now what make would you advise us to buy." "Why a Needham, of course. The late vice president, Garret A. Harker and O. F. Godfrey, late banker of Roseburg, have them in their parlor because it is the most beautiful in construction, sweetest in tone and up-to-date in design. I have examined all makes and would buy none but the Needham. They are handled only by T. K. Richardson, the available music dealer on Jackson St., where you can get any musical instrument you desire and all the latest music. Mr. Richardson is a reliable and up-to-date music dealer and it will pay you to patronize him."

Lets go and see the show tonight Uncle Bill, said Harry, I think it will be a good one, for the paper on the bill boards proclaims it so. Do you see Harry? That is what I say about good workmanship. That paper was put up by George Protnamer, the licensed bill poster. He does all the first class bill posting, and also distributing of samples for all the Eastern concerns who do business in Southern Oregon. George is an artisan and a gentleman, and his work is appreciated by all who patronize him.

Let's find a restaurant, said Harry, and I'm tired and hungry, said Harry, who looked just what he spoke. Oh, if you are hungry then we will go to Mrs. Bell Collins' restaurant, Cor. Main and Washington St. It is like going home for a good square meal that is wholesome and tempting. Just wait and see how polite the waiters are, and how nice the meals are served. The best of everything that is good to eat, where the culinary art is in evidence to every one of the many that eat there.

It is now about noon and dinner will soon be on, so let us go to the sample room, said Harry. All right we will go to The resort on Jackson Street. It is a very good place to get the best in town and the finest sandwiches, sliced and served just right, and the best blends of whiskey to be had in Roseburg, and real old gin from Holland, and the bar tenders are agreeable, besides Thompson & Sutherland's bartenders are always nice and polite, you will see lots of the boys there for they all know where to get the best drinks, and the management is civil and always keeps watch that every one is treated right."
