THE STREET CAR FRANCHISE.

During the past week much criticism has been indulged in regarding the merits of the three, or rather, two propositions submitted to the city for acceptance. Two of the propositions were substantially the same except a slight variation of the word twelve to two. The one wanted a valuable franchise for boom purposes for nothing, the other proposed to pay for it. The one idea is to sell real estate on the strength of the franchise, the other was a straight business enterprise. The one, it is claimed, is for immediate action and construction, the other was willing to pay a valuable consideration for time in which to commence operations and complete the work; and referring to the article furnished to the Plaindealer and published as editorial matter, thus binding that sheet to stand by its proposed utterances, we state: We have no desire to stop the advancement of the city's enterprises. We desire only the city's good or what we honestly believe to be the city's good, and the writer is willing that the city, if either of the two companies will go to work and finish their enterprise in a year, shall be awarded the franchise, conditioned, that they give a certified check from some solvent bank as a bond (or half the amount we offered) for the faithful performance of the contract.

There is no sound business policy displayed in criticizing the writer, because he was willing to put his FAITH into the proposition and as a new-comer attempt to put a little new life into public affairs and at the same time work in an unobtrusive yet conservative manner. At the same time we believe that if we push ahead our proposition that it would be met with bitter opposition and a struggle would ensue that would not be exactly for the city's good; and as a local sheet desires to place all the obstacles it can in the way of the proposition we made, we will just as gracefully and gentlemanly as we know how, withdraw our proposition from the council and will work with that paper to see that the company to whom the franchise is awarded carries out its contract, and if the stock of such company is placed upon the market we will even subscribe for some to see how the affair pans out. The PLAIDEALER will not place a single obstacle in the way of any legitimate enterprise, for the senior editor came here to make a new home for himself and family and wants to see the city grow and prosper and the growth and prosperity of the city or the city's enterprise means permanent prosperity to the newspaper which he represents.

THE IRRIGATION CONVENTION.
Last week the editor attended the above convention which met at Portland and he found three hundred delegates in attendance from every part of the state. The meetings were very harmonious and were conducted in a strictly business manner and very little windjamming was indulged in.

The chief business transacted at the association meeting was a set of resolutions asking for National aid in irrigation works for the arid portions of the state. The PLAIDEALER does not look upon the subject of irrigation as a local enterprise, but for the general welfare of the state at large. Twelve years ago we saw an arid tract of land in the Peecos valley of New Mexico that was so poor that the cowboys could not raise it—on it and afterwards 1,500 acres were platted under irrigation ditches and turned into an apple orchard and this year it took one car load of apples to market. That enterprise is not of a local nature, and there are thousands of acres of land in Central and Eastern Oregon from which, under a system of irrigation, just as good results could be obtained.

While the National Irrigation Convention are generally an irrigating affair, yet at the Oregon State Convention we never saw a man irrigate nor did we know of one doing so. It was the most orderly and straightforward business proposition of a convention we ever attended, and the writer feels proud that his first insight into Oregon conventions should have revealed the conclusions principles of true citizenship.

At the meeting of the National Irrigation Convention, Congressman Williamson and Senators Booth and Fulton, the latter two being rival candidates for the United States senate. Senator Booth, the dark horse, will have a large following from Multnomah county and will be supported by the business interests of Portland. Governor Geer, who is also a candidate has, it is said, 17 votes on joint ballot. We know nothing about the candidates but from a casual conversation we had with Senator Fulton, we believe that he is a broad and liberal minded man, one who would have the interest of the entire state at heart.

Charley Fulton has secured headquarters at Salem for the session. Simon has not followed suit. There is something sweetly retentive in the fact that Simon is not even being considered as his own successor. He is another man who has betrayed every confidence that was reposed in him. He has thrown down the state and his best friends for his own selfish ends. Long may he be politically dead—Salem Sentinel.

B. D. Hume, the Southwestern Oregon canneryman, is to establish headquarters at Salem, and draw the net for a United States senatorship. His chances for success are about as good as Mr. Geer's.

THE OREGONIAN WILL BE HARD HIT.
Several weeks ago the Oregonian in flaming headlines of the yellow journal strip, stated that it had found a man's nest in the affairs of the Oregon State land offices at Roseburg, Governor City and The Dalles, and Roseburg was made the center of the claimed crooked work. At this time old man Scott had powdered his face, trimmed his mustache, laced up in stays and was indulging the sweet delights of absolute forgetting the past and dreaming sweet visions of future glory in the United States senate, as the fumes of the green demon beclouded his brain in Paris. Before he left there was a caucus held in Portland, at which it was determined to get Land Commissioner Hermann out of the way, and as soon as Scott was crossing the Atlantic and heading up Jonah over the rail of the Conarder, Man Friday Bross and three or four of his lieutenants whose strength lies in the tenderloin district and the solid backing of a certain church organization in Oregon, commenced to work a political scheme of a far reaching nature. Hermann, it was intended, was to be thrown out of the land office to prevent him from being a candidate; the United States timber lands held up from entry, forest reserves were to be created and worthless land from which the timber had been cut was to be included in the reserve and the speculators were to be allowed to make new entries on virgin timber land in lieu of the worthless land surrendered to the government, and Scott, poor Scott was to go to the senate as the high and mighty political boss of Oregon.

President Roosevelt was communicated with and a protest filed against the timber claims being acted upon because of alleged fraud at the land offices. The President sent the communications of the Portland tailmashers to Secretary Hitchcock and he sent out special agents to investigate the presumed frauds. These agents have made right enquiry and examinations into hundreds of cases and have found nothing. One of them who was approached on the subject said that he had not a word to give to the press nor would he give any information of any kind; but we can positively assert that the report, so far as Roseburg is concerned, made to the secretary of the interior will show that everything at Roseburg is in first class shape.

This plan of vilification and slander as adopted by the combine at Portland will not win for Scott a seat in the senate; nor will it make him friends. A man to be a successful politician must build up on his own merit as a leader, not by tearing down other men; and now after he has attempted to assassinate politically every leader of importance in Oregon, is it any wonder that now the old man wants the last desire of his heart given to him, that the whole array of politicians in Oregon may say nay?

A man to have friends must be a friend and a true friend; but to be a political梁山like like Scott with his hand against every man and every man's hand against him, is to court the combined force and influence of all political enemies. This last act of Scott in trying to do such a dirty piece of work to Hermann and the land offices in Oregon, should cause him to be laid aside and given over to the tender mercy of his own conscience, as he contemplates in eternal retirement the fair character of the men he attempted to ruin and the base methods employed to boost himself into the U. S. senate.

BRUTAL IS NO NAME FOR IT.
During the past week we have watched the process of killing and picking turkeys as practiced by Roseburg, and we presume that the same method is employed in other parts of the state; and to say that the system is brutal, fails to impress the horrible process upon the mind.

The turkeys are hung up by the legs and a knife is inserted into the throat and immediately the boys commence to pluck the feathers from the bird while it utters cries of pain at the torture. We have seen the turkeys plucked clean of every feather and still be alive and making cries of anguish at the suffering; and in one case we went to the boys and told them if they did not immediately kill the turkey that we would have the last one of them arrested for cruelty to animals. We may look upon such methods and condone the offense, but did we ever stop to consider what effect such acts, allowed to be executed because of custom, has upon the boys engaged in it and their future as citizens of the state. The act brutalizes all the finer sensibilities of the boys engaged in it. It deadens their perception of right and wrong and has a tendency to lower their nature that pain and suffering has no sympathizing cord in their nature, and as a result such work prepares them for scenes of bloodshed and vandalism, ending too often if we may take other examples of bloodshed or torture—like burning niggers at the stake in the South—in being the means for a life of crime and vagabondage upon the public large. Such scenes should be prohibited by law and the plucking of birds or the skinning of animals before life is extinct should be made a felony if for no other purpose than protecting society from a class of men or boys by nature brutal and of a further dangerous process in having such brutal nature augmented and brutalized by actual contact in inflicting unnecessary pain and torture. We have seen many things and have many experiences but the most horrible and damnable in all its bearing for present and future well or woe to the individual or as regards the welfare of citizenship at large is to see the sight of a boy at a row, covered with blood, sticking turkeys and plucking them alive and laughing at the poor birds' cries of pain. Such proceedings are a disgrace to our civilization; a disgrace to our laws; a disgrace to those engaged in it and a disgrace and a festering sore that the citizenship will awake and do away by law with such iniquitous torture.

Oakland Narrow Gauge Note Burnt.
OAKLAND, Calif., Nov. 20.—The Southern Pacific Railroad Company met a four hundred thousand dollar loss here this morning by the burning of the narrow gauge Oakland mole. Fifty passenger cars were destroyed.

The Oakland side of San Francisco Bay is very shallow, requiring the building of about two miles of trestle to deep water, whereas mole depot facilities with a ferry landing were built to accommodate the transfer of passenger and freight traffic to the San Francisco side of the bay.

BREAKING THE NEWS GENTLY.
Some six weeks ago when Francis Pave and Roseburg were in high heat over their railroad project, the News attempted to cool down the hot air blasts of their newspapers by modestly hinting that Glendale would lead them both off with a black horse railroad up Cow Creek. We knew at the time that neither town had a ghost of show for a new road, as we were possessed with information they knew not of relating to a project, which, even now, we have not the liberty to reveal.—Glendale News.

The Portland Daily Oregonian of last Thursday cartooned some of the most prominent delegates at the Irrigation Convention which included Editor H. H. Brooks, of the Plaindealer; of whom the Oregonian said: "H. H. Brooks, of Douglas county, said that he was almost a stranger in a strange land. He was a newcomer in Oregon; but Douglas County, hearing there was something in the wind, sent him to the convention. He gave many practical suggestions on irrigation, drawn from his experience in Texas and New Mexico."

Willis Kramer, Democratic representative from Douglas, is said to have the finest whiskers of any man in the legislature.—Salem Journal.

Isho imported just enough Salem and Roseburg democrats, so that the state went joyously republican, pertinently remarks the Salem Sentinel.

Profitable Fruit Growing.
The best sale of apples in the Rogue River Valley this season, according to reliable reports, was made by W. H. Norrison, a well known and successful orchardist of Central Point, who disposed of a straight ten carloads at the fancy price of $1.50 per box f. o. b. Central Point. The shipment of the apples, which went direct to New York city, was completed a few days ago, and they are reported to be as fine a lot of fruit as ever went out of the state—absolutely free from any blemishes or pests, and as perfectly beautiful as apples could be.

There were 6000 boxes in the lot of ten carloads sold at this price and which netted $9000. On account of the unusual interest which is being manifested in the affair, and the large number of persons who have signified their desire to attend it, the date was decided to postpone it for one week, so that all who desire to attend, to prepare a colonial costume, and to make arrangements for additional features to be introduced. Don't forget the date and place, Nov. 28th, at the I. O. O. F. hall.

MERCHANTILE BUSINESS SOLD.
Mattoon & Co. of Riddle Sell to Mr. Underwood of New York.
Simon Caro returned to Roseburg this morning from Riddle where he has been assisting in taking an invoice of the general merchandise stock of A. R. Mattoon & Co., for several days past. This large and well known firm has just effected the sale of its mercantile establishment to a Mr. Underwood of New York State, who is said to be a genial and thoroughly practical business man, enterprising and wide-awake and who will know doubt be able to not only retain the large and growing trade of the retiring and very successful firm, but expand the business materially. The stock we understand invoiced something over $7,000 and the new firm has already assumed the management of the business. Mr. Mattoon, it is understood will remain at Riddle and seek some other profitable investment in that little town or vicinity.
