Theodore Roosevelt, as a man, is greater than the Government he represents. While the Government of the United States was unable to restore peace in the anthracite region, Roosevelt was not as President, but as a man, suggested a rational way to settle the trouble. The man triumphed, and the problem was solved. Thus spoke Samuel M. (Golden Rule) Jones, Mayor of Toledo, O., before the Chicago Peace Society. He sought to show that force of arms was futile, that war was inexcusable, and that killing in battle was murder. Mayor Jones declared, however, that he was an optimist, and in spite of recent wars, he said, the world was better off than it was 100 years ago, and was continually improving.

Unless the unexpected occurs, the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, of Eugene, Ore., will cut in 1903 about one hundred and fifty million feet of lumber at their mills. This will beat the world's record of the output of any one company. If this company should cut one hundred million feet annually for ninety-nine years, they would still own enough timber to keep them running another year. People who call the Oregonians mossbacks will have to apologize—Lumberman.

G. Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy, has succeeded in telegraphing across the Atlantic Ocean, from Cape Briton, Canada, to Cornwall, England, and the system is pronounced a complete success. It is a great achievement.

President Roosevelt is being strongly urged by the press and many senators and congressmen, to decline to act as arbitrator in the Venezuelan controversy. He will probably yield to the flood of protests.

Terrible snow storms are raging in the Middle Western states. Trains are blocked everywhere. How different here in mild and placid Oregon.

The Plaindealer wishes its readers all a merry and happy Christmas.

THE PESKY HOUSE FLY.
A Medium Through Which Contagion is Commonly Transmitted.

A well known Roseburg physician attributes the following interesting article to the Plaindealer:

Ist once began a series of experiments, which, added to observations this season, has convinced me that the common house fly is the medium through which typhoid fever and other diseases are transmitted more frequently than through water. I will briefly state my plan of procedure. Securing an assistant, flour and water was mixed to the consistency of cream, and the myriads of flies around the closet were sprinkled and sprayed with it. As soon as this dried every fly was marked that was struck by a particle. The vault, or box, was then covered with time and fresh earth, for two purposes: first, to drive the flies away, and destroy all the odor possible. While this was being done, several sheets of fly paper were placed about the house, especially in the sick rooms. These were now watched, and in twenty-seven minutes several flies thus marked were struggling on the paper. A little later the number increased, and they were seen crawling over the cups and glasses used by the patients, and also on the face of one of them. Fly paper and card board containing molasses was now placed in the home of my typhoid patients and of half a mile. These were examined from time to time during the day, but no marked ones were noticed, but on opening the doors and windows the next morning quite a number were seen through the house and on the paper, and on the second day they were observed in the window of a farm house nearly a mile away. These were now used to catch them. These were now observed in the two homes where they had been left for them, but these people were well-to-do and clearly, and there was but little, if any, fly around to draw them.

This experiment was followed by others this summer. In a little village of twenty families, of all of which flies were placed in an out-building, and within three hours it was black with flies, and swarms were around it. These were again marked, but by a little different process. The offal was buried, and the baits were put out in each home. Within six hours marked flies were seen in eight homes, and in forty-eight hours they were observed in forty-two homes. Several fish offal was carried back to town, in a field, and there was their appearance there in great numbers in a very short time.

On another occasion we had lime scattered over some fifth, some distance from the house, and in a comparatively short time flies were seen on the table with particles of lime clinging to their feet.

From these observations I am fully convinced that these little scavengers are the conveyors of many kinds of germs, alive with disease-producing germs. Go where you will and you find flies, in their season. There is no cesspool or vault too filthy for Mr. Fly to explore; in fact, the filthier it is the better he likes it. They move from place to place with wonderful agility. They may be driving into the filthiest material, and five minutes later be parading around your dinner plate, or using your glass of milk for a swimming pool.

KILLED IN BOHEMIA MINE.

Well Known Character Lost His Life by Carelessness.

COTTAGE GROVE, Dec. 23.—The harrowing news came down from the Bohemia mines that John Mansfield yesterday afternoon, while working at blasting in the Whale, Clay & Gilbert property, was blown into an unrecognizable mass by the discharge of a blast which he was not expecting.

Three men were working together and two left Mansfield to touch off the blast while they went to supper. There were three charges and but two were expected. Thinking that the other fuse had missed fire, Mansfield walked into the tunnel only to be killed by the explosion of the third.

He was a well known character in Cottage Grove. He went by the sobriquet of "Mineral John." He owned some valuable claims in the Blue River district.

On Friday evening, Dec. 19th, the people of Looking Glass gathered at the hall for an entertainment and box supper. Every number on the program was well rendered and all participants deserve equal praise.

A horrid tale comes from Drain about a young lady who thoughtlessly jerked her head back to keep from being kissed and dislocated her neck, and didn't get kissed either. It is a terrible warning to girls not to jerk. In fact, 'twould be better to lean over a little.

An editor in an eastern town announced that he would write an article on "Hell, and who would be there." Soon he received letters from one merchant, one preacher, two bankers, four lawyers, three physicians, four druggists, five saloon men, three undertakers and the postmaster, threatening that if he mentioned their names they would stop their paper and sue him for slander.

A story of a pathetic incident comes from Marconi telegraph on Oakland. On Monday morning, a young man who had been away to school arrived at his home town and hastened from the train to the residence of his star of hope. Her mother answered his nervous ring and invited him in. Yes, Jenny was at home, up stairs. She would call her. Stepping to the foot of the stairs she called, "Jenny, Will is here and wants to see you." A voice from above answered, "I can't come down, mother; I'm just taking a bath." The young man was impatient, and, stepping to the foot of the stairs, he called, "I must see you just a minute, Jennie. Slip on anything and come down." She slipped on the top step and came down and he saw her, but for much less than a minute.

The "fall stocking" will now have its lining.

The most interesting things that come into a newspaper office are not printed. The brightest and happiest Christmas days will come to those who try to make others happy.

Two women in Chicago took arsenic wafers for their complexion, and they are now both white and cold.

The woman who has found out how to flirt with her husband after the honeymoon need not be afraid of old age.

The average woman may not be able to tell a joke, but she can tell the scent of cloves at any hour of the day or night.

Why is the new arrival always called "a bouncing boy"? Because he makes you bounce out of bed like a rubber ball at 2 a. m.

Roseburg has a real, live masher that is thrusting his attention upon the ladies of that city and the Plaindealer wants the duke thrashed—Marshfield Sen.

There is little danger that either Germany or Great Britain will attempt to look into the nuzzle of the Monroe doctrine. They know it is loaded.

The bottle manufacturer's trust has raised the price of bottles. It is not so much the cost of the bottle, though, as what they put in it that causes trouble.

It is announced that the Shah of Persia has reduced his harem from 1100 to 60 women. It is very likely that the old fellow desires to escape a number of Christmas presents.

When the housewife at this season forbids her husband to look into some particular closet, he is at loss to know whether she is hiding his Christmas present or the bills he must pay.

A young lady who is looking forth to 1904, wants to know whether in proposing the girls should get on their knees? It was referred to the courtship editor, and he says the question is not sufficiently clear. He wants to know whose knees?

A country editor writing on trusts says that the country newspaper combine is the biggest trust on earth. It trusts everybody, gets cussed for trusting, mistrusted for cussing, and if it busts for trusting, gets cussed for busting.
