Their Highways. Two hundred years ago England hadthe worst roads in the world, because the peasantry living on the roads were nlone required to work them. In speaking of them Macaulay says that "a route connecting two great towns which have a large and flourishing drade with each other should be maintained at the cost of the rural population scattered between them is manifestly unjust. It was not until many toll bars had been violently pulled down, until the troops had in many instances been forced to act against the people and until much blood had been shed that a good system was introduced." Every class now contributes to the maintenance of the road system of

The French have probably the most efficient laws and regulations in the world for building and repairing of highways, says the Asphalt Journal. The minister of public works has the general superintendence of all roads and ways by land and by water. There are four classes of road recognized by law-namely, (1) national, (2) departmental, (3) military, (4) crossroads. National roads are built and kept up by the national treasury. Departmental roads aré a charge upon the departments through which they pass, and part of the military roads are kept up by the government and a part by the departments through which the roads

The crossroads are kept up by the communes, though sometimes in thinly populated regions these communes receive assistance from the government, especially when these roads become of importance. The national roads are paved like a street, having an average width of fifty-two and a half feet. The departmental roads are thirty-nine feet wide, and the military and crossroads are of variable width, Piles of broken stone are placed at convenient distances, and a man is constantly employed in repairing each

But if farmers wish people to know that they have good farms, good cattle, sheep or horses, good grain, fruit or vegetables, they should let the roads go through the best parts of the forms. of the farms.

Farmers Discuss Good Roads. It is an encouraging sign of the times when farmers' institutes and granges take up for discussion the matter of highway improvement. Such a sign was manifest at Pomona, Cal., during the convention of the horticultural clubs, at which an afternoon's session was devoted to a discussion of the various phases of the subject. Supervisor J. W. Longden rend a paper on "Oil on Roads," reciting the experience with oiling roads in his county. The county pays 50 cents at harrel for oil in Los Angeles, he said, heavy oil being better than light. After the roadbed is prepared a strip twelve to eighteen feet wide is oiled, about three times the first season, twice the second and in many cases once a year after that.

and we Needham because musicians Needham and must have them, and everyone who wants a good piano, a sweet toned piano, an artistic piano, a durable piano, find it under the name Needham. Arthur Frazer says the Needham has as good action as he has ever used; and Mr. Page, the baritone soloist, says that the tone is exquisite, and has placed an order with us for one to be delivered at his home in Philadelphia. In fact the Needham has no rival, and that is why we have just shipped a carload from the factory, and our last lot are beauties of new and artistic design : : :
