VIRGINIA DREW TRECOETT.

Miss Virginia Drew Trecoett's remarkable performance of the character of "Blady Yavason" in Verna Wood's famous dramatic version of Ouida's famous novel "Strathmore" is said to be so subtle that a new delight is found in every fresh view of it. She moreover shows such swift changes of passion and rapid transitions from one mood to another, that her creation must be seen several times before it can be appreciated. The novel of "Strathmore" is considered by the literary reviewers to be Ouida's strongest effort, abounding with metaphors and literary gems which has astounded the critics. The production with its entire New York stage effects, under the management of David Traite is announced for the 9th inst., by Manager Strong, of this city.

At the last meeting of the '96 Mental Culture Club, Mmes. Child and Willis were appointed a committee to look about for suitable land for the establishment of a park. This is a worthy movement upon the part of the club women, and one which should receive all possible encouragement and support, as a park is badly needed. Nothing can give such pleasure and recreation to so many people as a well improved park which is what the club has under consideration.

The Bridge Whist Club were very charmingly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Wollenburg on Friday evening. Due to the fact that so many of the members were out of town the attendance was rather small, but the evening was no less delightfully spent. The Basket Ball game at the Theater last Friday night between the Maroons and Co. "E" O. N. G. was hotly contested. Early in the first half, the militiamen piled up a score of several baskets and it looked very much as if the Maroons were doomed to their usual defeat, but fortunately pulled themselves together and by excellent playing the first half ended 10 to 9 in favor of the Maroons.

In the second half the Maroons showed their superior team work by several fine plays. Ryan, Bradley, Moore and Doyle did excellent playing and were all credited with baskets as was also Davidson. McCall and Ritzman did the most effective work for the soldiers. Next Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 25 and 26, the team from Company "G" of Albany, will play with the two teams here, and as the Albany boys have already won several games, and are credited with having an excellent team these will, with no doubt, be the best games ever witnessed in this city.
