Decision Affects Many States.
Sheep men of seven states and two territories were affected by the decision handed down Monday by Judge Hawley, sitting on the bench of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. In effect, it perpetually enjoins them from pasturing their flocks on forest reserves, says the San Francisco Examiner.
The Secretary of the Interior made a rule in December of 1897 which stated that the pasturing of sheep and goats on the public lands in the forest reservations was prohibited. The regulation further provided that a violation of the rule would carry with it a penalty of a fine not to exceed $500 or imprisonment not to exceed six months.
The sheepmen of Washington, California, Arizona and a number of other sections violated the rule and were consequently arrested and tried in various United States District Courts. Without exception, these courts, including Judge De Haven of this district, and Judge Wellborn of Southern California, held that the regulation was unconstitutional and void, because the Secretary of the Interior had trespassed on the legislative function in promulgating such a rule, and that only Congress had the power to pass such a law.
The sheep men consequently overran these reserves, as pastures there was much better than in other localities. Not only did the sheep destroy and graze by cropping it to the roots, but they also killed the young trees by stripping them of their foliage.
As the sheep men could not be prosecuted criminally, United States District Attorney Woodworth hit upon the idea of instituting a civil suit against them, and thus perpetually enjoining them from allowing their sheep on the reserves.
A writ of injunction was granted last August by Judge Beatty, sitting for Judge Morrow in the Circuit Court, restraining sheep men from pasturing their herds on Government reservations, as it was declared that the animals were devastating them. In the face of this order, a number of owners pastured their flocks on the Stanislaus Forest Reservation and four of them were arrested, convicted and fined $100, or sentenced to remain in prison until such fine was paid. They paid their fines, but appealed the case. Sheep men everywhere became interested. The summary action of the arrest of four herdsmen had the effect of causing all sheepmen to remove their flocks from the reserves, but united them in fighting the case.
The decision of Monday is final. By its provisions no sheep can be pastured on reserves without the permission of the general land office, approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

Do Right and Be Happy.
We have heard first and last, a great deal about "Hell." The preachers have been preaching about it for going on two thousand years, and a great many millions of human beings have been made very wretched by the word pictures of the roaring flames and hideous devil, but the only hell that we need to bother ourselves about is the hell of a guilty conscience.
"So long as one can manage to steer clear of that inner hell it makes no difference about the other one. The hell within—within the breast of the guilty—is real, absolute, grim and uncomplaining. It does not depend upon the preaching of the preachers. It is in no way affected by the result of the "Higher Criticism." It has no connection whatever with creeds and catechisms. Independent of all human deeds and theories, it keeps on its way, fulfilling itself as the cannon ball goes to the target.
Do wrong, and at that very moment you have made for yourself a penalty from which you cannot escape! Do wrong, and you provoke the fires from which no amount of praying, no intercession of priest or person, no sort of ecclesiastical juggling, will be able to save you!
The only way to be happy in this world is to do right, and nature will do the rest. When temptation comes, fight it down; when evil companions would lead you into violating the commands of your better self tell them to be gone; when the prospects of "pleasure," so-called, or gain, or any other thing would induce you to depart from the path of plain and simple duty, stand firm, remembering that no sort of "pleasure," no amount of "gain," can repay you for the loss of a peaceful, happy conscience.
The laws of nature are absolute; and while to those who obey them they give the "peace which passeth understanding," they kindle the fires of hell in the breasts of those who fail to respect them.

Blazer Hermann.
Hon. Blazer Hermann, who has been United States land commissioner at Washington, returns to contest the nomination for congress, created by the untimely death of Hon. Thos. H. Tongue. Blazer Hermann has some strong points as a candidate that the other aspirants will do well not to overlook. He relies on personal magnetism and long service to devoted friends, for hundreds of whom he has secured favors in the past, and if the nomination goes to one of the other politicians in the south end of the district he will be the man.—Salmon Journal.

Champion Kisser of the United States—Richardson Pearson Hobson, of Santiago fame, and Miss Ellen Stone, the Macedonian missionary, who is now in this country, will visit the Pacific Coast on a lecturing tour. Roseburg would give them a good house if both came at the same date and divided time.

Decision Affects Many States.
It does not require an expert to observe the careless breeding everywhere visible in the poultry yards of this country, says the Pacific Homestead. Many farmers who would not tolerate a scrub in live stock lines will let any old frozen-toad mongrel rooster have full and freely sway over the flocks on his farm. There is a feeling in the breast of every farmer that he can ill afford to keep scrub stock, but that does not apply to poultry and for that reason almost any kind is employed for breeding purposes. We are glad to note that some wise awake farmers have observed that the same care in the selection of breeders in the poultry yard is necessary that is needed in other lines and where this is found there is a decided improvement and a consequent satisfaction in growing poultry. The man who feels that "poultry does not pay" is sure to have that feeling realized, for he has no incentive to do any better than his neighbor call for and this is one of them.
The old pictures so often painted that farmers gather up all the poultry they can catch with the aid of the dog and all the hired men on the farm when it is necessary to take them to market and those having the ability and endurance to escape the vigor of man and dog in the chase are left as the breeding stock is only too true. Surely constitution is developed in a flock of this kind and occasionally resulting will be developed, as some of the fowls hide under the barn or in the woods out of the reach of the invaders. This is not the best way to select the breeders for another year. There is more than a racing constitution wanted in the make-up of the up-to-date hen. Constitutional vigor is a good thing to have, but it should be accompanied by other valuable characteristics. The matter of age will be essential in the selection of the breeders and by keeping a close watch on the best age to keep in the flock there will be an eye open for the layer and individuals possessing other valuable characteristics. Utility points will be looked after in the breeding stock in the poultry yard as it is in the live stock barns. What we need is more good stock in the breeding pens and a better and more careful system of selecting them each year. When this is carried out with the same diligence that is exhibited in live stock then will the scrub go and not until then. One other thing will be interesting to know by the average poultry keeper who does not think much about his poultry breeding. It is in cross-breeding. Indiscriminate cross-breeding will most surely produce mongrels of the very worst type. So many feel safe in making such matings on the ground that the males are pure bred and the females are also pure bred, and so mistake can be made. Not so. The offspring of cross-breeding will not be the equal of either parent and for that reason it is not advisable to engage in this practice.

Roosevelt's Practical Religion.
President Roosevelt's address in connection with the celebrating of the 200th anniversary of John Wesley, is already quoted and commented on by the Paris papers, which draw parallels between President Roosevelt's appeal to elite intellects to come forth from cloistered seclusion and take part in the hurly-burly of humanity and the raw facts of actual life, and the doctrinal and somewhat sectarian article entitled "Babel and Bible, Order and Disorder, Revolution and Tradition," written by Emperor William and published in the Grenzboten.
French papers point out that President Roosevelt's sturdy, practical God-fearing religion calls on men to work, act and fight and rely on their own strong arms and brains, while with Kaiser William the principles of divine right and the hand of God are paramount and dominant, permeating all else. To the Parisian mind President Roosevelt stands forth as the champion of progress, while Kaiser William is the personification of tradition and conservatism.
The Temps and Leclair dwell on the significance of the fact that Emperor William and President Roosevelt, who embody respectively the ideas of German and of American civilizations, both lean more and more toward Christianity and reverence for the Supreme Being, but the Latin races, on the contrary, trend more and more toward free thought and religious disintegration.

The Plague at San Francisco
Reports show that the health officials at San Francisco have commenced an active and systematic campaign for the purpose of stamping out the bubonic plague which has secured a foothold in the Chinese quarter in that city. Prior to the health convention, held in Washington about six weeks ago, there were many complaints to the effect that the San Francisco authorities were trying to suppress information concerning the plague, but were not properly active in plans for fighting the disease. The last reports show that the inspectors at San Francisco are now going into every room in the Chinese tenements, and making a thorough investigation of the sanitary conditions. There has been but one death from the plague since January 15, and the number of cases is being reduced to a minimum.

Kentucky Republicans for Roosevelt.
While there may be anti-Roosevelt parties in states further south, it can be said positively that Kentucky will cast her solid vote in the next national convention for Theodore Roosevelt. In fact it is said that Mr. Roosevelt has more admirers among the leaders here than any other Republican President ever had. Consequently if an anti-Roosevelt movement started it will get little sympathy from Kentucky.

The Star of Bethlehem in 1911.
It has been supposed that the star of Bethlehem, the herald of the Christian era, was in conjunction with two planets, Mr. David Forbes hazards the supposition that it was the comet called Halley's comet, which has an interval of approximately 75 years, 10 months and 6 days. It was last visible in October, 1855, and will probably, therefore, be seen again in 1911. Halley, who saw the comet in 1682, predicted its return to be in 1759. Several reappearances have been observed. Pompey's defeat of Mithridates in 192 B. C. was signalled by one appearance; Josephus mentions another at the destruction of Jerusalem about 75 A. D.
Mr. Forbes contends that one of the returns of the comet between these two dates must have been about the date of the birth of Christ. Some months before the comet was seen saw "his star" in the east, the comet would then be on its course toward the east, as it returns in a few months later it would be to the zenith above Bethlehem, about the end of December. If the subsequent dates are computed it will be noticed that the comet was apparently fifteen years out, and should have reappeared in 1820 instead of 1855. Mr. Forbes surmises this difficulty by remarking that it was not until the sixth century that Dionysius made out the present chronology, and that he then made an error of fifteen years, which became stereotyped. This year, therefore, should be 1885.

Pyallup Indian Reserve Open.
After fifteen years of effort on the part of Tacoma the Pyallup Indian reservation is absolutely open for the sale of allotted lands without restriction. The Interior Department has decided that under the act of March 3, 1893, the ten-year restrictions upon the sale of Indian lands have expired by limitation, and hereafter the Pyallups may sell or encumber their lands like white men. The Pyallup reserve skirts the eastern boundary of Tacoma, only a mile from the business center of the city. It has prevented the growth of Tacoma, eastward up the Pyallup valley, together with the utilization of the greatest portion of the tide flats for manufacturing purposes.
Commencing fifteen years ago, no less than five Pyallup commissions have been appointed either to investigate the subject of opening the reserve or of selling the lands under restrictions laid down by acts of Congress. While accomplishing something in the way of selling lands, these commissions have been very expensive. Hereafter all sales through the Commission will cease excepting the uncolored portion of the Indian addition to Tacoma, which is being sold for school fund purposes. The Indians can now sell their allotted lands absolutely without hindrance, but, on the other hand, they must also pay taxes, from which they have heretofore been exempt.

A Good Butter Maker.
The Holstein Friesian cow Sadie Vale Concordia, No. 32259, H. F. H. B. A. R. Q., 1124, whose milk in seven days made 30 pounds and 10.16 ounces of butter, breaking the world's record for this period. During the thirty days she gave 2754.6 pounds of milk, containing 123 pounds 8 1/2 ounces of butter. The world's official record has heretofore stood at 112 pounds. Sadie Vale goes to the front with a good margin. The test was made on the Brotherton stock farms of McAdam & Von Heyne, at Utica, N. Y., who own the cow.

China Again in Rebellion.
Rumors are again prevalent of approaching trouble in China, says a dispatch from London so the Tribune yesterday. An anti-foreign movement within the next few months is declared to be inevitable. The Standard correspondent at Tien Tsin says the entertainments which are being prepared at the palace for members of the legations, are like the treacherous friendliness that preceded the Indian mutiny.
Tung and Tuan are declared to be the villains of the plot, and the Standard correspondent thinks that the idea once again will be the powerlessness of the court to check rebellion. The northern border will come down under the two exiled leaders and nominally overpowered Peking and at the same time swell their following with all the forces in the capital and begin a grand march of extermination against everything foreign. This time, however, the Yangtze region and every port must rise simultaneously and for this purpose all the Yangtze defenses are being brought to highest state of effectiveness.
Russia is very much alive to the situation. The latest information received at St. Petersburg from the secret emissaries of the Russian Legation at Peking, indicates that nearly the whole Celestial Empire is riddled by a huge network of secret Boxer committees which only await an opportunity and a given signal to sweep the detested white barons out of the country.

We Press.
A dispatch from Seattle giving the account of a married woman's elopement says the police officers cannot imagine what the woman found attractive about the man who left with; that "he is bald-headed while his feet are so covered with corns and bunions that he is compelled to slice the tops of his shoes in order to walk with any degree of comfort." They don't figure much. If there had been nothing but feet the woman would be at home this minute.—Engene Guard.
