The great "Shadeland Wonder," preeminently the king of all outs, is the re-solt attained by a careful cultivation and selection from a little, wild, black, henced cat-attle, for the wild, black bearded out-still found in its wild state, in Spain and Mexico. From the wild plum, growing all over the Pacific Coast, and found in most of the southern and western states, have been cultivated all our valuable plums and prunes of today. The Italian prune, in all his regal glory, traces his ancestry, in an unbroken line, to the little, wild plum, and it is no mean parentage.

The royal Newton Pippin and the queenly, blushing Spitzen) drg are direct, lineal descendants of the little, much admired and much hated wild rose briar, developed, improved, transplanted, nurtured and cultivated. The resemblance of the wild rose seed-pod to some of the smaller varieties of apples is still quite striking. Is it not then possible to attain yet higher results? Is there no higher degree of perfection? In the year 1870 there was one horse in all the world able to trot a mile in two minutes and seventeen seconds. Today there are thonsands that can do a mile in 2:10, and hundreds between 2:10 and 2:021. Thirty years ago a horse weighing 1800
