A Harrow For Leveling the Furrow Slice and a Good Plank Drag. An Ohio Farmer correspondent sends for leveling the furrow slice and says: struck the plow beam every once in awhile when the harrow wanted to tip over too far from any cause. For this purpose I had to brace the handles quite wide apart-forty inches-too far for use in corn rows, but they can be placed in or out, as occasion requires, by substituting another round between the handles. Near the rear at the left is a crooked steel or fron rod seven-

The holes should be large enough so the teeth will slip in or out easily as they can be screwed up tight to hold them in the direction desired

This little harrow is attached to the ingletree of the horse in the furrow with the short chain so that it will arrow the furrow turned the round efore, working just forward of the furrow being turned by the plow. This urrow, however, may fall partially on the rear side of the harrow working in the furrow. This does no harm, but nly helps to hold that point down to its place. To the butcher such development would increase rather than lessen its value. It should be clearly borne in mind, there fore, that no beauty of outline, style or gracefulness of carriage will ever take precedence of proper development in the most important and valuable parts of the bullock. We should not assume, however, that the highest de velopment in these most valuable parts is incompatible with ideal beef form The truth of the matter is we seldon get high development in the parts from which are taken the high priced cuts except in animals which are symmet rically developed. It is entirely con sistent and desirable, therefore, that we hold up as our ideal standard of the prime steer a combination of wel developed parts from which are taken the high priced cuts and a uniformly high development in all parts espable of taking on flesh which gives to the animal symmetry and smoothness of outline, that style and that beauty oth erwise impossible.
