

Selecting a Boar.

In selecting a boar for breeding purposes, either for the herd that is kept purposely to produce breeders or the herd that is maintained only for producing for the pork barrel, there are some rules that it is essential to observe...

It is a mistake to wait until late in the season to buy your breeding boar. You have a better opportunity early of securing the tops. You get the first pick, and it is worth something, though, of course, there are plenty of good boars to be selected along through the season...

In the first place, you are then ready when the breeding time commences. Some breeders wait until late in the season, then have difficulty in securing a boar. The pig is sold that they are corresponding about. Another breeder has already sold out that they expected to receive one from, and other disappointments are likely to arise until you have lost a couple of weeks or more of the time when you desired your hogs bred.

This sometimes in your despair causes you to use an inferior or second class boar, which is a bad influence on the herd, and will be shown in the next year's pig crop.

Select a boar that will counteract any deficiencies in the sows and improve any defects. If they are deficient in back get a boar with an extra good back. This is a matter that should be carefully considered. If they are not strong enough in bone and leg, secure a boar with a strong bone. If their noses are too long, get a boar with a shorter nose, and at the same time try to improve in the good parts of the animal. You can't get the hams too good nor the backs too broad nor the sides too deep with the length in proportion.

Breeding is a science and requires a great deal of study to make the proper crosses. Every breeder should be familiar with the standard of the breed in which he is interested, so as to keep in his mind the object and improvement that the breeders as a rule are striving for. This would enable him to detect any defect in his breeding animal and teach him to discriminate between the essential and nonessential points.

A whole lot of people make a greater cry because of a white spot on the body than a weak foot. The color is one of sentiment; it is a fad, and not one of real worth as affecting the man who is producing for the market, though it is all right to be considered, but don't forget those points of greater importance.

All breeds have in their background as its basis the motive of improving the pork raiser's profit in the hog produced. While it is a very desirable thing to have a boar well marked, it is not really essential to its value. If you have two hogs of equal quality in every respect, point, and one is properly marked and the other is not, of course it will be proper and right for you to take the properly marked one.

All breeders should remember that it is important that they should use their utmost endeavors to improve the chest, wherein is contained the vitality; the back, loin, legs, feet, head and jaw.

Barley as Food for Horses.

While it is undoubtedly true that oats is the standard grain food for horses, and will probably continue to be so through all time, yet there is a wide place for the feeding of barley, not only to colts while growing, but also to horses at work; and for fattening old horses, it would probably be correct to say that there is nothing like it. In feeding barley it is not customary to feed it right along, the same as oats, although to young colts that are growing it may seem to be a nice way to advance.

To horses at work it is usual to feed it two or three times a week, but when the object in feeding is to fatten old horses and put them in a condition for selling, then it would be well to feed barley to them every day. The favorite old time method of preparing barley for such feeding, is to steam it. This is considered preferable to boiling.

It is thought to be a matter of some importance to know just how far the steaming process should be carried. It is not considered judicious to steam it to the point of causing the grains of barley to burst open. It is steamed enough when it allows moisture to escape when squeezed between the finger and thumb.

It has been noticed that the barley fed to horses, old or young, exercises a very salutary influence on the coat. This it does very probably through the influence which it exercises on the digestion, as it is well known that the relation between digestion and the character of the coat is close. It has also been recommended to crush barley and moisten it before feeding to horses. Barley thus prepared is considered preferable to barley that is ground. The reason why barley thus crushed is preferable to barley ground, and why barley that is steamed is preferable to barley boiled are not very apparent. Practical men, however, have come to the conclusion that there is a difference in favor of crushing and steaming, as compared with grinding and boiling.—The Farmer.

Heaves in Horses.

Most people know the disease of livestock only in their effects. The trouble called heaves in horses belongs to this class. When once this disorder is well established it is incurable. It has very intimate association with the digestive organs, with the stomach.

By giving an animal the best sort of food any predisposition toward heaves is lessened. A directly practical observation in this connection is that all bulky food containing but little nourishment should be omitted from the food of animals troubled with heaves.

One authority on the subject of heaves asserts that the disease is unknown where clover hay is never used. Dieting and not medicine is the idea here: "Many different medicines have been tried, but not one has yet been discovered which gives even partial satisfaction."

These are good general directions as to the course to be taken in feeding: "A small quantity of the best hay once a day is sufficient. It is a good plan to slightly dampen this or the like food to

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of an order made by the County Court of Douglas County, State of Oregon, in the matter of the estate of Thomas Dunneath, deceased, on the 28th day of September, 1903, and entered in the Probate Records of said Court on said day, directing and authorizing me, the undersigned administrator of the said estate, to sell at either public or private sale, as provided by law, the real property, of and belonging to the said estate, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, for the purpose of paying off the claims against the said estate and the expenses of administration.

Dated at Roseburg, Oregon, this 29th day of September, A. D. 1903.

Write your Farm Experience and Send

In 1902 the Southern Pacific Company published a pamphlet entitled "California Industries". It contained principally the personal testimonies of experienced cultivators, says the Pacific Home-Steer. A short description of the different sections was given and following this the testimonies of fruit growers, dairymen, etc., etc., showing the methods of successful cultivation of oranges, grapes, olives, alfalfa, etc., the cost to cultivate the yield per acre and price the products were sold for. This was one of the most practical pieces of literature that we had put out. Mr. W. E. Coman, G. P. A., of the Southern Pacific Company, has written the agents of that company in Oregon that it is the intention to get up a similar publication for Oregon and asks that all who are able to give the results from their farms, dairies, fruit orchards, berry patches, etc., in Oregon write the results for publication in the pamphlet. He says he wants only the actual results under favorable conditions—the same as can be accomplished by an intelligent grower under normal conditions; that is, he wants only honest representations. Any of our readers in Oregon who will take the time to give their experiences will be doing the company a courtesy and the state justice. You may send your statement to Mr. Coman, or to the PLAINDEALER and it will be forwarded to him.

Postal Oddities.

With one exception there has been a deficit in postal revenues every year since 1835. Thousands of letters are mailed every day without the vestige of an address to indicate for whom they are intended.

Mail matter of any kind addressed in a vague and indefinite way, such as "to the most prominent physician," etc., is not deliverable. Benjamin Franklin, first postmaster general, boasted that under his administration all the cities of the country had been provided with a weekly mail. One may mail a letter destined for foreign parts without prepayment of postage. It will go forward to destination, and the recipient will be required to pay double rates for the privilege of reading it if he values it sufficiently.

At the Chicago post office a record is kept of the different ways of spelling the name of that city on mail addresses. At last accounts 280 varieties had been tabulated. Among the less intricate of these are Zizazo, Jagjago, Hiphah, Jaljlo and Chachicho.

Work Done While Asleep.

Cabana tells us that Franklin on several occasions mentioned to him that he had been assisted by dreams in the conduct of affairs in which he was engaged. Constant states that while writing his "Contract of Studies" he was frequently obliged to leave a chapter incomplete and retire to bed, and on awaking he found it, on more than one occasion, finished in his head.

The most remarkable testimony of this kind is perhaps that of Sir Thomas Browne, who declared that, if it were possible, he would prefer to carry on his studies in his dreams, so much more efficient were his faculties of mind when his body was asleep.

Hysteria in Dogs.

Nerves are the disease of the present day among human beings, but I did not know till recently that hysteria is also a malady of dogs. A friend of mine owned a dog which suddenly one day was seized with an attack of nerves. Since then it has been very ill, wandering incessantly round and round the room, refusing food, but still recognizing its owner. Another little dog suffered from hysteria in consequence of fright from railway traveling, and it really seems as though civilization, in rendering dogs more delicate and more susceptible, had done them a distinct physical injury.—London Graphic.

City Treasurer's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that to all parties holding city warrants endorsed prior to Dec. 4, 1901, are required to present the same to the City Treasurer's office for payment, as interest will cease thereon after the date of this notice. Dated Roseburg, Oregon, Nov. 3, 1903. H. C. SLOCUM, Jr., City Treasurer.

Piano Buyers.

You will notice that we do not have to be continually striking out for a new make of Pianos. The Needham has been our leader for 14 years and is today a leader among the high grade pianos of the world. Some cheap pianos are made high grade simply by getting a boost in the Oregonian or some other leading paper, through those big dealers who think they can, and do make the majority of people believe it simply because they say so. It doesn't take ink, boost or high commissions to make a good piano, but instead the very best mechanics, and the very best material such as are always used in Needham pianos. 29-1/2 T. K.
