While George Johnson was eating supper Tuesday evening one of his horses was taken from the stable. Marshal Hogan and Clyde Johnson immediately started in pursuit and found the horse at Winchester bridge. Two men, evidently hobo's, were seen riding one horse and it is probable they were aiming to reach Roseburg, turn the horse loose and take the "blind baggage" from there. Being followed too closely they perhaps went to Roseburg on foot as the county bridge at Winchester is undergoing repairs and they did not wish to attempt crossing on the ferry. Last winter the same horse was taken from Mr. Johnson's barn and returned after being ridden several miles in the night.
