That there is a great deal of fricthe Nation and the Oregon delegation in Washington there is no doubt, and this friction has been brought about entirely through a difference of opinion. The President holds that a pullic office is a public trust, while it seems that our delegation act as though they believed that a public office is a private snap, a 13 ward for fealty to be given by them to their most ardent and useful supporters. The President has asked the delegation to recommend men for office who are first class citizens capable, honest and of good repute, whose purity of lives stand out like a beacon at sea. ideal and it is most commendable. It tion. is equally commendable that the mem- Oregon bers of the Oregon delegation stand mick, T. T. Matlock was elected mayby the their friends. Whenever the or of Pendleton and H. L. Gilkey, Oregon delegation recommended a man for office, if it was one of importance, special agents made a report to the President on the public record and private life of the man recommended. If the President was satisfied he appointed the man to office. If the man did not come up to the requirements he said to the delegation: please name another man; and instead of accepting the Presidents action as final and recommending another man and thus paying two political debts with one office and throwing all the responsibility on the President, the delegation said: we will make no change in our recemmendation and demand your reasons for turning our man down. Several of the men whom the President accepted have turned out rather badly but he has not held that to the debit side of the delegation's balance sheet. The delegation seems to have forgotpoint whom he desires to appoint and it is only by courtesy that recommendations are turned over to any the part of Uncle Sam.
