

Oakland Owl Hoos.

School district No. 1, Oakland, has levied a seven mill tax, to pay current expenses.

Miss Mattie Howard, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. C. Underwood, has returned to Calapalooa.

Lower Calapalooa school district has levied a ten mill tax, to pay for building and equipping the new school house.

J. J. Brown, of Rice Hill, was in the city Wednesday. He has a fine assortment of lumber for sale at the Thompson mill site on his farm.

C. D. Smith, has been elected a director of Calapalooa school district to fill the unexpired term of C. A. McNabb, who has moved out of the district.

J. P. Hughes, of Wilbur, has returned from California. He has left at this office a cross between a lemon and a pomegranate. This hybrid was secured at Marysville, and is 5 1/2 inches long and 3/4 inches in circumference. The fruit is prized very highly, as it cost Mr. Hughes about $50. This amount represents his expense account and it is not likely he will return.

Twice within a year an Oakland 14 year old boy has been fined by the city recorder, and rather than allow him to remain in jail his mother has worked early and late to pay his fines. Most mothers would do the same thing. Such maternal devotion is natural. As each 16 year old boy work and support families, a great many people in Oakland think this young hoodlum should at least earn enough to pay his fines.

D. W. Duke, returned to the Cooper & Duke saw mill on the Upper Calapalooa the first of the week. Mr. Duke reports many improvements at the mill and immediate vicinity. Good roads five rods wide, have been built from Mrs. Orin's farm and from the Upper Calapalooa school house to the mill. About 200,000 feet of logs are on hand, and there is about 75,000 feet of lumber in the yard. Extensive repairs have been made throughout the mill. The new machinery is of the latest pattern, including planer engine wheels, cut-off saw, jig saw and turning lathe.

Tuesday morning four Oakland boys were arraigned before the city recorder and fined for disturbing the Japanese section hands a few days ago. The two elder boys were fined $7 each and the younger $5 each. The recorder offered to give some wholesome advice, but fears the effort was like casting pearls before swine. This is the second time the elder boys have been before the recorder, and this official naturally feels that if they are again arrested the state or the Southern Pacific should take them in hand. The public is willing to make allowance for mischievous pranks occasionally, but when boys from 13 to 15 are eternally mixed up in some mischief it is time parents took the reins of government in hand. For a boy to be in jail twice within a year is not an enviable record. The two younger boys perhaps were not guilty of intentional wrong, but like old dog Tracy, were caught in bad company and were compelled to pay the penalty. It is hoped and expected they will learn a lesson from experience. The boys were put in the city jail, but during the day their fines were paid.

January McClure's.

The biggest thing certainly, in the January McClure's is the article of Carl Schurz, "Can the South Solve the Negro Question?" It is absolutely masterly in elevation of thought and vigor of treatment; and will awaken discussion, much of which is bound to be vehement. Neck and neck with this article in political and social significance is the second chapter of Part Two of Miss Tarbell's "History of the Standard Oil Company" taking up "The Fight for the Pipe Lines." The other articles comprise a eulogy of the "Wild-Animal Sargant and His Patients," and a stirring account of "Tunneling Out of the Libby Prison," by James Wells, one of the survivors of this daring exploit.

Of fiction, there is to suit everybody. Henry Wallace Phillips begins his new "Red Saunders" series with a rollicking account of the blossoming out of the Sander Ranch. There is a tale of a highwayman in the good old English times stage coaches, by Eden Phillpotts, with the suggestive title of "A Pickaxe, and a Spade"; a tragic and compelling story of Manila, "The Failure," by Jas. Hopper; and a whimsical tale of love routing mathematics, "The Tree of a Thousand Leaves," by Alice Brown.

The January McClure cover is to be remarked. It is by Jessie Wilcox Smith and one of the most beautiful child drawings, certainly, ever made.

Be Quick.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes croupy, or even after the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. It never fails, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by A. G. Marsters & Co.

ECONOMICAL HINTS.

Velvet Gowns With Two Bodices. Renovating Old Stoves. Although dress is still costly, a woman if she uses common sense need not buy so many costumes as formerly. For instance, take the velvet calling costume. This can have a second bodice made to wear with the one skirt in the shape of an evening blouse made with transparent neck and flowing chiffon or real lace sleeves. For day wear with this same costume there can be a blouse waist unlined and trimmed with embroidery applique.

Wide belts of madie are very smart just now, and one can be made to do duty with several costumes. They are made on a boned foundation, with small rosettes and a fancy buckle. Fancy styles in fichu shape renovate many an old fashioned costume. They are made in all sorts of combinations and present an excellent opportunity for the utilizing of remnants. They are mostly trimmed with tiny ruchings of chiffon and taffeta or narrow bands of minikin and sabbie.

The large chiffon undersleeves are also prime factors in the renovating of an old dress, for tight sleeves may be cut short and widened by the addition of bands or figurings of velvet.

Skirts are much fuller around the feet, and the additional width is some times gained by setting in fancy plaies in the way of trimming.

MATERIALS AND MODES.

Spotted Velvet - Plush Revived. Heavy Lace to Match Gowns. Ecru, cream and stich colored lace is embroidered with black spots to give it character. The most popular trimmings are those which can be divided into parts to be used as tabs, scrolls and irregular motifs.

Spotted velvets make smart tea gowns and blouses or form charming and visiting gowns for the dainty woman.

To be smart a woman's costume should be as far as possible of one shade. Gun metal gray, for instance, is worn with squirrels, and sales harmonize beautifully with brown cloth.

Flush will be used in many ways, and beaver plush is greatly in demand for smart millinery.

The new chiffon velvet makes ideal velvet gowns because it is so light in weight. It is very expensive and therefore not likely to become common.

Very heavy lace of the Paragon or cindy type is used both on costumes and on millinery, and it is dyed to match the material.

Lace laces in brown or black have a velvet border to match and are trimmed with velvet and stich ornaments and large plaies.

Trained skirts are no longer modish, but smart gowns have long skirts, with the length falling mostly round the back and sides and the front certainly an inch longer than is actually required. Walking skirts are quite distinct in style and have an all round appearance, but only for country wear do they perfectly clear the ground.

Burnt orange appears on many costumes of brown, and it is especially suited to this color.

The illustration shows a black and white chiffon waist trimmed with jet.

YALE STUDENT A JUNKMAN A Relative of J. P. Morgan Pays Novel Football Bet.

George Green Coolidge, member of the class of 1904, Sheffield Scientific school, Yale university, who hails from East Orange, N. J., where his father, a cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan, is a wealthy business man, recently took a license at police headquarters to buy, sell and peddle junk, rags and old bottles in a pushcart, says a New Haven special dispatch to the New York World. Coolidge, who refused to state his reasons, also took out a bootblack's license for his friend and classmate, F. E. Johnson, Jr., also of East Orange.

Coolidge was not at the fashionable St. Elmo clubhouse when a reporter called Johnson declared that he knew nothing about the bootblack's license. He said that he and Coolidge had a wager on the Harvard-Yale football game, Coolidge betting that Harvard would score. If she did not it agreed to purchase a pushcart license at a cost of $2.

"Coolidge evidently intended to turn the joke on me" by getting me a license to boot black boots," declared Johnson. "He ally you don't believe a cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan is going to peddle junk, do you? It's simply a bet."

But the fun of the joke is that the holder of a junk license under the law must make a weekly report to police headquarters of all his purchases and business, whether he does any or not. The prospect of making a weekly trip to police headquarters is more than Coolidge bargained for.

"Don't forget to say that Coolidge is a strong candidate for best dressed man of the class," said one of his classmates to the reporter at the St. Elmo club. "Don't fail to mention that it is the only man who ever took four girls to the Yale Junior promenade."

Chief of Police Wright of New Haven was asked if Coolidge would be given a license. "We shall require a strict accounting of all his business done," was the reply. "This young man has seen fit to launch out as a junk dealer. Why should we bend the law to suit his purpose? We shall require a strict accounting of all his business done."

When Coolidge heard of this he was so worked up that he paid a visit to Chief Writan at police headquarters and asked to have his license revoked.

"No, sir," promptly declared the chief. "That license was issued for one year, sir. You fellows can't make a monkey of me. You may come here weekly and report until further notice."

A twinkle in the eye of the chief leads to the belief that he will not be so strict in the enforcement of the law as appears.

XMAS A DAY OF TERROR.

Hard Lines of the Players Who Entertain Theater Crowds. In the vaudeville houses where continuous performances are given Christmas day strikes terror to the most time hardened dramatic soul.

The doors open anywhere between 9:30 and 10:30 a. m. and close at about midnight. The headliners play their customary two turns, but those lower in the dramatic scale play "on demand," generally about four times. It is "chance" on the audience-in plain English, to tire it into leaving the house and making room for the line waiting in the lobby.

The low salaried vaudeville actor, therefore, eschews any Christmas dinner and ties himself to the nearest quick lunch counter, there to feast on turkey sandwiches, execrable coffee and pie as heavy as his spirits. By the time he has done his last turn on the stage he is more ready for bed than for the festive board.

To the unsuccessful actor Christmas is likely to bring that blessing of the Bialto, a "turkey date."

Scattered within easy access of New York are numerous small cities, or towns, where property speaking towns, where good shows never come. Of these the outlying manager keeps a list, and on quick notice he secures Broadway for cheap, unengaged talent, from which he organizes his company.

He hastily in some playhouses conveniently idle at the time, rushes some cheap printing upon the poor, unsuspecting town and lands there bright and early Christmas morning. The population, show hungry, welcomes the holiday diversion and packs the town hall, matinee and night.

The actors are thus assured of a good Christmas dinner and supper and a percentage of the box office receipts. Usually these are divided according to the importance of the roles played by the actors. This will take them over until New Year's day, which brings another "turkey date."

Many an actor now featured on Broadway has played his share of "turkey dates." One in particular tells how, five associates, he put on "The Menecemus Case," not abashed that the cast called for no less than twelve capable actors, and was quite radiant over the returns of "one Christmas dinner with trimmings" and $125 to be divided among the actors—Washington Post.

CHRISTMAS "BARRING OUT."

A Strange Custom of Schoolboys and Teachers. "Barring out" was one of the Christmas customs greatly in vogue in England two centuries ago. It is a custom that obtains not only in England, but to some extent in our own country, to this day, although it is not particularly a Christmas custom in our country.

"Barring out" was the keeping of the teacher or master out of the school house until he yielded to such terms as the boys of his school chose to dictate. If the boys were able to keep the teacher out of the schoolhouse for three days and nights he was bound by all the laws of the custom to come to terms with the boys and to grant them all that they demanded in the way of half holidays and abbreviated lesson hours and extended recesses.

On the other hand, the teacher, if he refused the school, the magistrates would be bound to submit to such terms as he chose to dictate. As these terms usually included the severe touting of all the boys having anything to do with the barring out of the teacher, the boys were on the alert to keep him from defeating them. More than one Christmas time of rejecting has been turned into a time of weeping and wailing on the part of boys whom some barred out teacher has defeated.

A Laundry List For Christmas.

For a laundry list obtain a delicate pocket size with two or three leaves and bound in cloth. From embroidery linen cut a piece sufficiently large to face the front and back with a margin a quarter of an inch wide all around.

On one-half of the piece mark the words "Laundry List" within a frame at the middle, and to decorate the remainder of the piece draw a conventional flower design.

When the work is finished, apply the lines to the slate and cover with glue by turning the edges over and making them fast to the inside on a narrow edge of the cloth binding that is usually left between the edge of the slate part and the binding.

At the top of the list connect a ring with a bow and ribbon, by means of which it can be hung in a convenient place, and at the knot tie a piece of string half a yard long, the end of which a pencil may be attached.

The solution which the New York chemist has discovered to remove the beard will evidently not be popular with barbers nor with women who use their husbands' razors for ripping seams or paring callus.

According to the statement of the United States treasurer, the circulating medium has reached $29.90 for each of us. These look a good deal like bargain counter figures.
