Beyond question the most elaborate and charming affair the younger society set of Roseburg have ever been invited to enjoy was the Valentine party given Saturday night by Miss Kathryn Fullerton at the spacious West Side home of her parents, Judge and Mrs. J. C. Fullerton. The decorations were strikingly unique from the fact that hearts were used exclusively. In the hall and back parlor scarlet hearts overlaid with a tiny yellow heart in each center, were threaded on narrow ribbons and were draped in graceful semi-circles from the picture molding, and appeared in fanciful figures about the handsome mantles. In the front parlor and dining-room the decorations were similar, save that the color scheme was reversed and the hearts were yellow with the little ones in red. As befitting the occasion, "Hearts" was the game, and at the close the heart-shaped box of chocolates went to Miss Harriet Barker, and the scarfpin, a heart of pearls pierced with a golden arrow, went to Mr. Milo Atterbury. Miss Kathryn was assisted by her mother, Mrs. J. C. Fullerton and sister-in-law, Mrs. Nathan Fullerton. The guests included Misses Vell Barker, Hattie Barker, Lillian Critser, Mary K. Brooks, Ethel Brooks, Gertrude East, Lillian Stanton, Elvira Reed, Wilhelma Reed, Marjory McDougall, Addie Sacry, Nita Kabat, Agnes Pitchford, Edna Parsley, Clara Morrison, Rose Josephson, Dale Harmon, Messrs. Earnest Bradley, Austin Ryan, R. C. Knight, S. E. Forbes, Warren McWilliams, John Ryan, S. Josephson, A. Q. Johnson, G. Norman, N. Osmundson, H. S. Tabke, S. Zigler, J. A. Robertson, W. Landon, E. Davidson, R. Bellows, G. Culver, Von Casey, M. Atterbury, Wm. VanLeuwen.

On Saturday afternoon Miss Frances Howell was hostess at a most delightful "pit" party at which about thirty-five young ladies were guests. The game was played most enthusiastically, and at the close Miss Edna Parsley was declared winner, having won every game, and was rewarded by receiving a handsome Haviland cup and saucer. The decorations throughout the house were beautiful in the extreme, being a combination of English ivy and scarlet hearts threaded on scarlet ribbons, and the cut flowers were red carnations and asparagus ferns. At the close of the game a delicious lunch was served. Among the guests were: Misses Edwards Erickson, Adeline Stewart, Enis Stuart, Joe Byers, Anna Clark, Leona Kabat, Bessie Kidder, Aura Thompson, Jennie Cook, Edna Parsley, Agnes Pitchford, Rose Bitzer, Winnie Bitzer, Elva Wimberly, Kate Buick, Jeannine Buick, Regina East, Gertrude East, Velle Barker, Mary K. The "One Night in June" Company played to a small house at the Roseburg theater last Thursday evening. While the play was not altogether first-class it sufficed to pass the time away. Some passages were really meritorious while others seemed as though the bottom had fallen out and the acting depreciated to the level of mechanical motion. This was especially noticeable in the scene wherein the heroine presents to her father the proofs that there is no stain remaining on her life. It is a vital part of the play and enacted as it was made a weak spot in the performance. The leading lady is not the one advertised in the role and her strenuous presentation of the part was wholly amusing.

Hon. John H. Shupe passed a good night and his general condition is improved. This is the statement given out this morning by Dr. George E. Houck, the attending physician. "We have strong hopes of his recovery," he said. Dr. George F. Wilson, of Portland, arrived Sunday morning for consultation with Dr. Houck and returned home last evening. An effort has been made to secure a trained nurse for Mr. Shupe but none have been found available thus far.

Obituary.

Mrs. Elizabeth Harris Fegles died at her home one mile from Yoncalla, Tuesday, Feb. 2, at 5 o'clock. The deceased whose maiden name was Elizabeth Harris, was born in Hartford, Washington County, New York, Nov. 13, 1844. In 1856 moved to Pocahontas Co., Iowa, where in 1860 she was married. In 1879 moved to Holt Co., S. D., and in 1892 moved to Yoncalla, Douglas Co., Ore. She was taken sick in April 1903 of a complication of diseases, heart trouble being most prominent, and was a great sufferer until the white winged angel bore her peacefully away.

It is not an easy matter to write intelligently of a lady so worthy as Mrs. Fegles, and one who during her residence in this community, won the profound respect of and high esteem of all. She was noted for gentleness of her disposition and the tenderness of her manner and purity of her character and her many acts of kindness were known only to herself, those she aided and the God she delighted to serve, as her whole life was that of a true Christian. There was much in the life of Mrs. Fegles that denoted true womanhood, and she desired to live in accordance with the Golden rule. Living, her friends honored and loved her, and dead, they sincerely mourn for her.

She leaves an aged husband and six children to mourn her loss. Charles, Clarence, Wesley, and Edward Fegles, Mrs. Addie Cross, who are living at Yoncalla, and Mrs. Ida Brown living at Grants Pass.

Eyes that have passed from earth and its glory, Have a sweet vision that earth does not know; Ears that hear not the world's sweetest story, Drink in the songs that from Paradise flow. Tenderly, peacefully lay her to rest, Strew the pale roses over her breast. Yoncalla, Feb. 8, 1904. S. E. A.

Boy Used Up.

Joe Wright the 12-year-old son of Lincoln Wright, in an encounter with a boy named Whitney Hastings, 14 years old, last Thursday evening after school had his left arm broken and also dislocated at the elbow as well as receiving painful injuries in the back. It is said by witnesses that the Hastings boy, who is a much larger and stronger one than the Wright boy, ran up behind the latter and pushed him over in a hole of water, and jumped on him with his feet. The injured youth was taken to his home and Dr. Twitchell called to attend him. The trouble the boys had is said to have had its origin over some wispering in the school room.
