Olson, a prominent lumberman and capitalist of Tacoma, is here looking over the situation with a view to buying a large tract of timber land and establishing a lumbering plant in Glendale If all of the jumbering mills are installed here that are in contemplation, the roar and buzz of the saw will be almost deafening before long. This is an ideal lo cation for lumbering mills.

Several more parties in this section were arrested, the first of this week, by deputy game wardens, for killing deer out of season, and Justice Montgomery imposed a fine of $25 and costs upon each of them. We understand that a number of other arrests will soon be made for violating the game law. The authorities are determined to put a stop to the terrible slaughter of deer that has been going on recently, merely

LONDON, April 9-The Associated Press learns that the exact status of the much-forecasted Anglo-Russian understanding is as follows:

After King Edward had given his personal assurances to Emperor Nicholas that the anti-Russian comments in the British press did not represent the feeling of his government, Foreign Secretary Lansdowne informed the Russian Ambassador, Count Benkendorff, that he would be glad to reopen the negotiations looking to a settlement of all matters now in dispute between Russia and Great Britain. Lord Lausdowne did not stipulate a basis or enter into any details.

Ambassador Benkendorff expressed his pleasure at the offer and transmitted it to St. Petersburg. Lord Lansdowne's action is understood o have been taken as a material expression of King Edward's personal messages ... There for the moment the matter stands. Negotiations beyond Lord Lausdowne's offer

The Associated Press learns that Russia and Great Britain secretly negotiated to the same end 18 months ago, but the attempt to draw up an agreement came to an abrupt end when Lord Lausdowne announced in the House of Lords that "under no consideration would Russia be allowed a port on the Persian Gulf." Since then that question has been regarded as a deadlock. Under the chan ed conditions and with the good offices of the French government secured through the recent agreement, Lord Lan downe is said to entertain the hope of an eventual settlement by which the Anglo Russian spheres of influence throughout the world may be determined and the ceaseless and costly rivalry between the two nations ended fotever.

On all sides it is pointed out that an agreement on outstanding matters with Russia is far more difficult than the recent arrangement with France. The paramount questions are the delimitation of the Afghan frontier, access to the Persian Gulf and the spheres of influence in Persia.

It is thought that Russia's request for a part of the Persian Gulf will never be granted, but the Associated Press learns that lately Russia has exhibited a keen desire to acquire interests in Abyssinia so as to gain access to the Red Sea. This might be arranged in lieu of a port on the Persian Gulf.
