Last Friday about noon E. R. Applegate's residence was discovered to be on fire and by the time a crowd had gathered to fight it, it had made a good start and it looked as if the house was doomed. While some were fighting the flames others were carrying out the furniture, but by hard work the flames were extinguished. The fire started from the five and burned off the rafters and several boles in the roof. Two carpets were ruined by fire and water and some clothing was burned. Mr. Applegate
