communicated his suspicions to the attending physician handed the bottle to Dr. Carter that its contents might be analyzed; and the analysis showed it contained nearly or quite a grain of arsenic. About the same time a discovery was made by Alice Yapp, one of the nurses, which tended to deepen suspicion and incriminate the erring wife. Miss Yapp found several fly-papers soaking in water in a basin covered with a towl and a dish. Evidently some one was preparing a solution of arsenic, for each one of the same kind of fly-papers as those in soak was found, on analysis, to contain more than two grains of arsenate of potash and arsenic. It was afterwards ascertained that Mrs. Maybrick had purchased one dozen of these fly-papers at one drug store and two at
