At the death of Dr. Temple he was again offered the post, and his acceptce of it was very popular both with in the Established church and without He was a great admirer of the noted dissenting divine, C. H. Spurgeon, and pronounced the benediction at his grave. He was a warm friend of the late Cardinal Vaughan and when in Scotland has not only attended Presbyterian services, but preached in Presbyterian pulpits. The archbishop's sympathies are broad and his ideals high. Althouga tradition imposes upon the occupant of the see of Canterbury the observance of much ontal and the income of the post is $75,000 a year, Dr. Davidson prefers a simple life and democratic ways When less burdened with dignities, he was wont to drop into a cheap resrent and chat with the clerks over heir lunch or climb on top of a bus and talk with the driver. He is a man of much tact and courtly demeanor, but has no patience with some of the ustoms which have been handed down
