AN OLD QUESTION RAISED AGAIN BY SCULPTOR BIONDI'S SUIT.

The suit brought by the Italian sculptor, Ernesto Biondi, against the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York city recently was a very unusual character, and the controversy precipitated by it was a singular one.

The subject of the work is a scene on the streets of Rome during the old heathen festival of the saturalia.

The group has nine figures. In the center stands a gladiator and at his side his wife, a matron woman.

seen in the streets of Rome during this popular festival, and the work as a whole is intended as a study of human nature.

These are not like her mother's. "Why didn't you stay with your mother?" "I said they are not like hers. Mother's were not half as good."

An amusing objection was made to a work of sculpture executed for the exposition at Charleston, S. C., in 1902 by Charles Albert Lopez, one of the champions of Signor Biondi.

No man ever discovers he is being flattered, no matter how bungling the flatterer may be.

The credulity of the newly married woman is so beautiful in its simplicity that it ought to be a joy forever—but it isn't.

The heavy coat bill will crowd so closely the heavy ice bill that we will by again reminded that extremes meet.

You can't always tell whether a man is able to raise the wind by the amount of blowing he does.

A man can't help taking chances sometimes, because some folks are such easy marks.

It takes a lot of faith to make a woman feel humble when she is wearing a new dress.

When a man is in love he is either too miserable to care what he does or too happy to be of any use.

Predictions won't bring rain in dry weather.

A man does not need to take a course in music to be able to blow his own horn.

Never try to borrow money of the man who gets up early in the morning when he doesn't have to.

He Deserves It. Some things there are that I don't like. I find a pearl necklace along the busy, teeming pike.

No matter who or what or where. The person, subject of the spot. You'll always find this fellow there.

His foot presumption drives me mad. I've tried in vain to kindly be. And gentle patience I have had.

In Slavery. "John, here's the new typewriter."

"She has her husband well in hand. I should say so. She picks out his necktie and his typewriters."

An Impossible Man. "These pies are not like mother's."

"Why didn't you stay with your mother?" "I said they are not like hers. Mother's were not half as good."

Always Looking. "Why don't you go to work?" "What would interfere with my business?" "What is your business?" "Looking for work."

Spick and Span. A man so clean you'll seldom find. A model, goodness knows. Because the fellow changed his mind.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

THE GREAT PUBLIC INTEREST IN THE ILLNESS OF SENATOR GEORGE FRISBIE HOAR

Hoar showed what a strong hold the "grand old man of Massachusetts" had upon the affections and respect of the American people.

Shortly after the Fairbanks vice presidential boom took form a man with a camera came in and told the senator he would like to have him

"Go ahead," said the senator, assuming a statesmanlike attitude at his desk.

"But," said the photographer, "I would like to have you step down in front of the capitol."

"Nonsense," exclaimed the senator. "Why should I go down in front of the capitol?"

"Why," explained the photographer, "I have a fine new automobile there, and I want to get you to sit in it and have your picture taken."

"Young man," the senator almost shouted, "you get right out of here. I'll do nothing of the kind."

"But, senator," protested the photographer, "you do not understand what I mean. This is a new kind of automobile, and if you will only come down and sit in it I'll guarantee that you will have your picture printed in the advertising pages of all the principal magazines of the country."

Blooded by averted by Secretary Matthews, who led the photographer to the door and turned him loose in the corridor.

The other day Representative James E. Watson of Indiana was reminded of a story they used to tell on Adlai E. Stevenson when he was vice president of the United States.

"Stevenson was walking along the street one day," he said, "when there started a discussion of the inconsequential position of the vice president."

"He wears a hat the same size as any other man," said James E. Watson, "and wears the same size shoe as any other man, and he has not a darn thing on his mind but the health of the president."

Senator Patrick H. McCarren, the Democratic leader of Brooklyn, who is at war with Tammany Hall, is one of the country's original Parker men.

Long before Judge Parker's nomination was considered anything like a pilot of loaded him with the kind of river chaff and badinage that must have recalled the days of his youth more vividly than would have the taste of one of his grand-mother's pies, and our author was enjoying it as keenly as if he were at a country circus, stowing away page after page of the most delightful material and secretly bugging himself with the thought that he was getting a large amount of desirable copy.

At the moment when he decided on beating a retreat in order that his stenographer might take down the interview while it was fresh in his mind the pilot left the meet, and turning to the humorist, calling him by name, said: "Here, you take her and lie while you're handler at it than I am. Trying to play yourself for a stranger and an innocent? Why, I knew you before you had spoken seven words, and I made up my mind to find out what was your little game. It was to draw me out. Well, I let you. Didn't I? Now, take the wheel and finish the watch, and next time play fair and you won't have to work your passage."

The Countess of Yarmouth, who has returned to America on a visit, was Miss Alice Thaw of Pittsburgh prior to her marriage to the somewhat impetuous Earl in April, 1903.

During her sojourn abroad she has acquired an excellent British accent. It is said, and can say "Oh, lawney!" in the manner born. Her marriage to the earl, who had been an actor and newspaper writer in New York for a time, caused a great deal of comment, and there were all sorts of exaggerations printed concerning the amount of her fortune, and of the money she allotted the earl. Her personal fortune, it appears, consisted at the time of the marriage of only $500,000, the major portion of the income from which the countess herself receives.

When the Earl of Yarmouth was an actor in New York he lived in a frugal manner, because his allowance from England was insufficient for his needs. He rented an apartment of seven rooms for $30 a month. This flat was without latter day conveniences and adorned a saloon. The earl lived on the sixth floor and was obliged to climb stairs, there being no elevator. Without a servant, the British nobleman did chores in a good natured manner and cooked many of his meals and kept the place in good order. In fact, his fire escape looked
