"SWEET CLOVER."
A Coming Attraction Full of Interest and Real Merit.

Mr. Otis B. Thayer, who plays the part of "Jerome Holcome," which he created last season in "Sweet Clover," Pauline Phelps and Marion Short's successful comedy drama, secured the unanimous approval of the critics in every city in which he appeared. They pronounced him the legitimate successor of the late James A. Hearn, and his portrayal of the quaint old Connecticut farmer as one of the best, most life-like and natural creations ever given to the stage and gave him the credit of scoring an artistic triumph. His methods are natural, quiet and easy and the alternate pathos and humor with which he imbues the part are like the sunshine and shadow which chase each other over the billowy fields of clover for which the play is named.

Mr. Thayer's portrayal of this part was a revelation to his many friends and admirers, for although he has many successes to his credit they are notably in the leading comedy roles of a large repertoire of comic operas. A few seasons ago he decided to embrace character work and that his selection was a wise one is evidenced by his portrayal of Jerome Holcome in "Sweet Clover," which has established him as without a rival in this particular line of work for which he is so eminently fitted. At the Roseburg Theater next Monday evening.

DIED.

COTTON.—At Myrtle Creek, Oregon, Monday evening, Sept. 26, 1904, Mrs. Alice W. Cotton, after a lingering illness.

Mrs. Cotton was the wife of Rev. J. T. Cotton, of the M. E. Church, South, and was for some time a resident of Roseburg. She was the daughter of Geo. Dement, the pioneer hotel keeper at Myrtle Creek and leave two children, a son and a daughter by a former marriage. During the past two years she has been in very feeble health, much of the time confined to her bed. She had been somewhat better of late and recently visited in this city and Eugene.

Mrs. Cotton was of the most amiable character, well meriting the highest esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. Her heartfelt sympathy now goes out to the bereaved husband and other relatives in their great sorrow. The funeral services were held at Myrtle Creek Wednesday.

WELLS.—At Elktion, Or., Sept. 25, 1904, Mrs. Ira Wells, aged 83 years. Mrs. Wells was an Oregon pioneer of 1850. In that year she and her husband settled near the present town of Elktion. During the past five years Mrs. Wells had resided with her daughter. She was a good christian woman, loved and respected by all who knew her.
