and afterward it was stated at the state department and department of commerce and labor that the latter had been charged with the execution of the exclusion law treaty and was working in perfect harmony and in consultation with the Chinese minister in order to frame a treaty along lines of the present treaty, continuing the present rigid exclusion of coolie labor and simply moderating conditions un-scholars are admitted. Something of the kind is regarded as necessary, in view of the fact that by direction of his government the Chinese minister last spring formally denounced the present Chinese exclusion treaty. That notice of denunciation is to take effect December 7, and there will be no treaty relations between the two governments on that subject until a new convention, is agreed upon.

The president has decided to en force the existing Chinese exclusion laws after the abrogation of the O, Lord God of Joshua, Jacob and Jim Jones; hear us, we beseech thee, in this our hour of political bewilderment, for we are tangled up in the calf ropes of democratic deception and are about to break our own necks. We are scattered worse than a flock of timid toads after a hail to at the cabinet meeting Monday storm. We have an aching void in the pit of our stomachs which nothing but the fat of office can satisfy. We are badly scared, physically undone and morally rotten. We have floundered around, and split up, and busted apart and run together and fused and fought and foamed and fizzled till we can't tell whether we are stepping in the footprints of Tom Jefferson or following the dictates of the devil. We don't know where we are at, where we come from or whither we goeth. All is darkness and gloom. We are cast down in the dark valley of humiliation. On our right are the towering summits of national progress. On our left are the briny waters of democratic dissolution. Before us, in plain view, are encamped the pesky republicans in the full enjoyment of official bliss, and just behind us looms up our own records ler which Chinese merchants and which brings shame on our faces and a griping in our bowles every time we look back. In this pitiable and awful condition, O, Lord, we come to Thee for succor. We have attempted to scare them away from the offices, but every time we try it we get hurt. We confess they are too much for us. Their numbers are like the sands of the sea.

> In campaign years our editors write stirring appeals to the boys; our candidates go tearing over the country making democratic orations and speeches and we all will fairly bust our galls urging the people to stand by our party and save the country, while all the time the pesky "rads" go on sawing wood and don't say anything. Every campaign we have our hopes lifted high. We rip and snort and rare and charge and rave and bawl, because our hosts seem invincible, but oh, Lord, on election day it just seems to rain republicans, and we come out of the fight at the little end of the horn and feeling worse than sheep-killing dogs. Lord, we confess we have been very wicked. We acknowledge having said millions of things that were not exactly true, and having done thousands of things that would shame the devil. But, Lord, it was the best we could do under the circumstances. We know that Tom Jefferson would not have worn a red shirt, stuffed a ballot box, threw rotten eggs at republican speakers, nor voted a dead nigger. But, O. Lord, you know circumstances alter cases. Jefferson didn't have such a host of republicans to fight as we have. We never dreamed of the size of the job we would have on our hands. Argument was all that was needed in his day. But the republicans have multiplied on the face of the earth till it requires all the stealing red shirts, slander, lies, intimidation and trickery that we can command, to give us any chance and then we get licked off the face of the earth. Lord, what are we to do? We know we are unworthy to ask anything of Thee. We feel ashamed of

Only a few months ago we said President McKinley was a dangerous man to be at the head of the government. We called him an emperor, a panderer to the trusts, a trampler upon the constitution, a tool of plotocrats. Today we acknowledge we lied. We, with all the world, know he was a gentleman, a patriot and a Christian. We are sorry he is dead. We are sorry we said so many hateful things about him. But O. Lord, we promise not to be so wicked any more, if Thou wilt only help us beat the republicans one time more.

Lord, we are in rare need of an issue. We haven't got anything. Some of us want free silver and some of us don't. Some are eager to make imperialism the issue and some want trusts. Then there are many of us who are lugging that old issue of low tariff back into the ring. Lord, we confess with a mighty confess, that we don't know what we want. We trotted in our low tariff one time, and, Lord, Thou knoweth what an awful mess we have made of things.

shudder at the thought. We know that this country is already too big for us to manage. The republicans seem to have the democratic party by the tail and a down hill pull. But, Lord, may it not always be thus. Help us to smite them with a terrible smite, so that every postoffice in the land shall be ours. Help us this once and we will not bother Thee again as long as the salaries hold out.

But, O, Lord, if we are not on praying grounds; if the gates of mercy are shut against us: if the accounts are closed, and the book sealed, if Thou canst give us no guiding star to lead us to victory, if we have sinned away our day of grace; if we are everlastingly beyond the pale of Thy sheltering hand and Thou wilt not help us, Lord, please don't help the republicans, but just stand by and you'll see one of the confoundedest fights you ever witnessed, for we are bound to do some-AMEN
