NOVEL METHOD OF SUBTERRANEAN TRANSPORTATION.

The rapid transit commission of New York city has recently accepted a novel device for underground passenger transportation. It is nothing more than a development of the escalator or moving platform idea. The first of these contrivances will probably be operated under Thirty-fourth street in a subway capable of accommodating eight platforms, two of which will be stationary. Two will travel three miles an hour, two six miles an hour and two nine miles an hour. The fastest platform will be fitted with cross seats.

The Waning of Socialism

It must be a matter of surprise to party socialists to observe the progress both state and fabian socialists are making without the aid or intervention of a socialist party. The cities of England, Scotland and Wales have taken over not only water works, gas and electric lighting plants and street car lines, but are also building tenement houses to rent to the poor and one city maintains a municipal laundry. In this country the supplying light and water is deemed a proper subject of municipal government and the recent victory in Chicago in favor of municipal ownership of street car lines was brought about in the face of socialist party ticket. All over Great Britain the laborers and mechanic are building and operating most successfully co-operative mercantile companies and the same movement has begun in this country. Socialists have but little part in these activities and are disposed to frown upon them. They claim their object is the revolutionizing of all industry rather than the gradual achieving of that as a succession of progressive steps. While the riotous impelled by the desire to seek socialistic remedial measures as a means of amelioration of the condition of the people, without thinking of the origin of such economic theories. While they are advocating the millennium the people are moving forward and may pass the party leaders on the way. The reason is to be found in the distrust of political parties. The people are beginning to realize that political parties instead of the means of carrying out the public will, have been the means of circumventing and annulling it, and before they can emancipate themselves from economic misgovernment they must break the fetters that bind them to party, and this they can not do by flying to a party that demands the most complete subservience of any party. Today, unaided by any party, a movement that will soon become overwhelming in its force is silently but irresistibly changing the political methods of the nation. This is the idea of the origin of laws with the people. The inhabitants of cities are demanding the right to frame and adopt their charters upon the initiative and to vote upon measures through the referendum. Three states have the power under their constitutions and three more will vote upon such amendments next year. Oregon is one of the three states with power in the people to amend the constitution. Under this power the people of Oregon could vote to own and operate the railroads of the state but in spite of this power residing in the people the socialists have refused to attempt its exercise. They are elaborating their theories, dreaming that the triumph of their party will eliminate selfishness, greed, ambition, immorality, race prejudice, the prejudice of ignorance and superstition, but to make no use of the tools and means lying at their hand's touch by which they can try to convert the people to practical application of their own theories. Before the power to act they stand appalled. They seem without leaders except for partisan ends. It is better so—it is better that it came from the people without any party.—G. P. Herald.

AN EXILE NO LONGER.

Death of Sergius Restored Wealth and Rank to Grand Duke Paul.

According to an old saying, it is an ill wind which blows nobody any good. The assassination of the Grand Duke Sergius proved in one way good fortune for his brother, the Grand Duke Paul Alexandrovitch, youngest son of the late Czar Alexander II, and uncle of the present emperor. By a decree of Czar Alexander I. members of the Russian imperial family who marry without the consent of the emperor forfeit their rights of succession to the throne. This imposes a heavy load of responsibility upon the monarch as to the love affairs of his royal relatives. The czar's uncle, Paul, has given him no end of trouble. Tall, handsome and rich, but epileptic and dissipated, he has been the hero of several eulogies. His first wife was the Princess Alexandra of Greece, whom he drove to an early grave, some say to suicide. After her death he ran away from Venice with the young sister of a distinguished court lady. Casting her off, he eloped from Paris to Monte Carlo with the wife of the Count de la Rive, a noted and beautiful poetess. She deserted him. He returned to Russia and was sent on a diplomatic mission to Berlin, where he proceeded to fall in love with the wife of an ambassador. Another elopement followed, ending in the suicide of the woman. On his next return to St. Petersburg he became infatuated with the Baroness Piatkoff, the most beautiful woman at court and a friend of the czarina. After a scene at a ball, to which the lady wore some splendid diamonds which the Grand Duke Paul had received as a bequest from his mother, the late empress, the Baron Piatkoff obtained a divorce from his wife. She afterward married the grand duke, who thereupon was exiled and deprived of rank and titles. The tragic death of Sergius moved the czar to suspend the sentence, permit his uncle to attend the funeral of Sergius and resume his rank, titles and estates.

THE GRAND DUKE PAUL ALEXANDROVITCH.

ALEXIS NICHOLAEVITCH.

Heir to Throne of All the Russias, an Infant With Titles Galore.

Heir to Throne of All the Russias, an Infant With Titles Galore. Alexis Nicholasievitch comes to sit on the now tottering throne of his father and rule as czar of all the Russias he will be known as Alexis II. It is said the nihilists have marked him for slaughter. His birth on Aug. 12 was hailed with joy throughout Russia. A salute of 101 guns was fired announcing it. When twenty-four hours old he was made honorary colonel of the Finland guards. Before he is a year old he will have been decorated with many titles of church and state.

When the czarowitz was christened on Aug. 24 the church bells rang throughout Russia, the czar issued a manifesto announcing numerous reforms, not many of which have since been carried out, and the christening itself was a scene of unbounded splendor.

THE CZAROWITZ ALEXIS NICHOLAEVITCH.

Even for Russia. The baby had as sponsor an emperor and an empress, two kings, a princess and four grand duchesses. He owns caps and cloaks and robes of gold and precious stones. One of his caps is ornamented with forty-two large gems. He has a shroud of cloth of gold which contains pictures of religious scenes all worked out in gems. In the imperial nursery where little Alexis will play and study he will be attended by dwarfs, descendants, as tradition says, of the midwives whom Peter the Great employed as apt turners in the imperial kitchen.

The Popular Liver Medicine Will Keep You Well

It carries off all poison in the system and leaves no injurious effects.
