The Government Should Prevent Overcapitalization

HERE are many things the government can do to check the rising tide of combination for the suppression of competition. It can so amend our laws that the stocks and bonds of corporations SHALL NOT EXCEED THE CAPI-TAL INVESTED in the enterprise, and there will be instantly removed one of the most potential motives for modern consolidation. If this had been the law, Carnegie would have endowed fewer libraries, but there would have been less softening of the MORAL tissue for educational processes to strengthen.

I venture the assertion that had such a law been in force during the last quarter of a century nine-tenths of the consolidation which has revolutionized business would not have occurred, and, while we time. would have fewer magnates, WE WOULD HAVE MORE MEN

IT IS QUITE LIKELY THAT SOME MANUFACTURERS WOULD HAVE GONE DOWN IN THE RIVALRIES OF TRADE, BUT IT IS BETTER TO DIE FIGHTING THAN TO BE STIFLED IN THE DUST TRUDGING ALONG BEHIND THE CONQUEROR'S CHARIOT.

"I really cannot stay-I've been all over town, It seems to me, today And then they talked of books,

Of music, and of clubs, Of chambermaids and of cooks. Of leaky laundry tubs,

Of candles and of soup, Of churches and of gowns

Of fevers and of croup, Of how to ward off frowns. Of wrinkles, freckles, too; Of divorces and brides,

Of scandals old and new, Of fashion's latest strides, Of neighbors and of friends,

Of enemies and kin, Of pleasing coffee blends, Of where "she" got that pin, Of certain people's debts, Of certain people's fights,

Of the contending sets, Of certain woman's spites, Of papering the hall, Of what each one had read,

Of which one owed the call, Of what somebody said. Of how "she" held her looks, Of golf, and cards, and tea, And back again to cooks-And then: "Oh, goodness Cried Mrs. Brown at last, "I must be rushing on, The afternoon is past-At least, it's almost gone.

"That's one thing I detest About a formal call-One has to look her best And scarcely talk at all.
