Probate Orders.

Saturday morning the last will and testament of Warner Talkington was filed in the Probate Court. The estate is valued at $25,000, with numerous heirs and assigns.

The will provides that the brothers and sisters of the deceased shall receive $200 each. They are Jacob C. Talkington, John C. Talkington, Julia E. Neece, William B. Talkington, Chas. H. Talkington, James Talkington, Jas. M. Talkington, Albert W. Talkington and Frank P. Talkington.

An order has been made by the County Court closing the estate of Julius Ambrum. Anna Uhl, a niece of the deceased, is named as heir. Carl Hoffman, the administrator, was allowed $80 for his services the estate declared settled.

Lloyd H. Swan and Robert L. Swan, both having become of legal age, have been appointed executors to relieve James Byron. They are the principal heirs.

E. L. Swan and L. H. Swan are to share alike in all property that is not thus devised in the will.

Lloyd Swan will receive for himself or heirs 656 acres of land near Brock way. Robt. Swan is given by the will 512 acres and lots, 1, 2, 3, and 4, in sec 24 tp 28 s 7 w, also a tract of and between the Donation claims of Joseph Huntley and Elijah Olivant, and a piece of land near the Donation claims of Wm. M. Night, Wm. Lyles, and J. B. D. Lee, as well as a parcel next to the claim of J. F. Shettle.

Jas. Byron, Elijah Olivant, and John Sprague have been appointed appraisers.

IN CIRCUIT COURT

T. E. Bledsoe, by his attorney, Louis Barzee, has filed an action to recover the amount of a promissory note from J. O. Johnson, for $300.

D. D. Velde and wife, of Pekin, Illinois, arrived in this city last Friday to enjoy a pleasant visit with their brother-in-law, Rev. W. C. Reuter, pastor of the M. E. Church. Mr. Velde is one of the substantial business men of his home city, and is spending his annual vacation in touring the Pacific coast having just returned with his wife from a trip as far north as Skagway, which they enjoyed very much. They traversed over glaciers, caught big fish, one halibut weighing 135 pounds, and had a general good time. On their return they spent several days at the Portland Exposition. Saturday was spent up on the cool North Umpqua in quest of the festive speckled trout and after a few days visit here they will return home via San Francisco, Los Angeles and the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. Mr. Velde is a very genial and interesting gentleman and his splendid products, especially his grains and fruits.

The little one was born July 23, 1904, near Riddle, Oregon. He has gone from earth and is suffering to a better and happier land.

The funeral was conducted from the home by Rev. Andrew Carrick, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, on Tuesday following the demise at 10 a. m., interment taking place in the Masonic cemetery.—Brownsville Times.

Down by the Umpqua

The minister, a large portly man with iron-gray hair and mustache, who had been preaching every day and night for several weeks at camp-meeting, feeling tired and worn, one afternoon left the tent, where he had delivered his sermons to large audiences, and shortly walked through the forest, toward the Umpqua. Arriving at the river, he scrambled down the steep bank and seated himself beneath a maple, near the edge of the water, to rest awhile and to meditate.

The main body of the stream flowed by clear and placid, but a small portion, near the minister, rippled over large boulders. Blended with the music of the breeze in tall tree-tops the loud, sonorous voice of Rev. Thompson, who was now preaching, sounded faint and mellow in the distance.

Dipping his hands in the river, the minister bathed his face and throbbing temples, then gazing out over the clear, limpid water, at the reflection of white, fleecy clouds and bits of blue sky, he fell into a reverie.

He had always believed that God was a person, who sat upon a golden throne, in a far-away country, somewhere, beyond the skies; that He created evil; that He sent sin, sickness and death into the world and punished His children with terrible afflictions, in order to make them obey and love Him, and to save them from an all-powerful devil. But now, for the first time in his life, he began to doubt if his conception of God was right.

If God was infinite and eternal, He could not move as a person. Then He could be finite and temporal. If God created evil, He would be conscious of it, a part of it, therefore He would be evil, and not God. But He was a spirit, Good, and Good could no more create evil, than light could create darkness. "If this is true," thought the minister, "then I have always believed and preached of a monstrous lie; I have been an idolator. I have led others into idolatry, and, with them, have worshipped an idol, which I thought was God."

A large blue crane, flying up the river, at upon a rock, near by, and all unconscious of its surroundings, stepped off into the water, bent back his sinewy neck until his head rested between his wings, then doubling up one of his long, slender legs beneath his feathers, he stood on the other, and waited.

The minister had become so absorbed in pursuing his train of thought, that he failed to see, and was unconscious of the crane, as the crane was of him.

New ideas, which he had never before dreamed of, came to him in quick succession. Was heaven a locality, a place of rest, where idleness and inaction prevailed? No, heaven was a state of spiritual consciousness, outside of the five physical senses, and could be gained while here on earth by thinking, living, and demonstrating God, the divine principle of man.

Was there a personal devil, a being with horns and hoofs, who reigned in regions of darkness and, tortured his victims in a great lake of fire and brimstone? Such a belief now appeared foolish and ridiculous. The devil was malicious thought, evil suggestions and motives, which led mortals into all kinds of sinful, discordant conditions.

The minister began to understand why his prayers had always remained unanswered. When praying, he had always bowed the knee, and poured forth, in a torrent of words, a long, fervent petition, not to God, but to a mind picture, drawn by the imagination. True prayer was not petition, but the realization that God was ever present; that He was only Mind and Life, and that man, spiritual man, was His image and likeness.

Spash! The crane's head darted down into the water; then standing on both legs he held up in his beak a large, wriggling fish, got upon a rock, and without ceremony, indulged in a delicious feast.

The minister and the crane were both occupied with their own affairs, that they still failed to see each other.

The minister had sincerely believed that he was a true follower of Jesus. Was he? Did the Saviour ever try to draw people into religion by appealing to their emotions, and working upon their sympathies? No. He destroyed their sins, taught them how to utilize the power of God, and showed them the way out of materiality.

Wrapped in deep thought, he sat there for a long time. He saw that his way of thinking, and his methods of preaching were entirely wrong, and that instead of merely believing in God, he must understand Him, and assimilate His nature, until he was able to do the works which Jesus did.

Hearing a mosquito buzz, near his head, he gave himself a ringing box on the ear.

The crane saw him, and, uttering a terrific, frightened squawk, shot into the air, then went flopping down the river, out of sight.

The man had gone down behind tall, rugged mountains, the trees cast long, wavering shadows over the water, and twilight was fast deepening into darkness.

The minister looked at his watch, then climbed up the bank, and walked back to the tent, a wiser and better man.

Dollar Saved Represents Ten Earned. The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by A. C. Marsters & Co.

A Poem on Garbage

When our garbage is gathered at night, Oh, my! Oh, my!

Our streets will present such a different sight, Don't sigh! Don't sigh!

Though to you it may seem But a beautiful dream, It will surely come true

By and by, by and by. Money is needed for salaries, automobiles and such.

They come high, they come high! And the looks of our streets don't count very much.

Thus we sigh, and we sigh! But the terrible smell that our streets possess

Our consciences soon will make beautifully less, I guess, yes, I guess!

Our garbage will shortly be gathered at night; Then we'll give the glad shout, "Our council's all right!"

By and by, by and by!

Musings

Even poor advice is legal tender when handed out by a lawyer.

Many of the Wisconsin bachelors have been heard from. They say they would rather pay the $10.

See to it that your wife is kissed and caressed, even if you have to do it yourself. Says an exchange.

A Pennsylvania judge has decided that a woman is boss of the kitchen. Why did he omit the rest of the house?

Henry James says the newspapers use "sloppy English." This is letting us down easy. He might accuse us of "slinging big grammar."

General Fred Funston's strenuous father has been fined $5 for wrecking three Kansas saloon joints. A hero and a martyr in one family is over-crowding things, even in Kansas.

"Brother," says an editor, "don't stop your paper because you don't agree with the editor. The last cabbage you sent us didn't agree with us, but we didn't drop you from our subscription list."

Arthur Cloak and sons have joined the local auto brigade, having purchased a new 15 horse power Buffalo Pitts traction engine. John R. Sutherland, Fritz Stauffer and W. M. Holson are already trying to get up a race with Messrs Cloak to come off during the district fair.

There is more trouble ahead for the fellows with fractious teams, as well as more prospective damage suits. Messrs Cloak have purchased a 15-horse power traction engine. Like the auto cars and bicycles, its right on the public highway will probably be disputed by some people who don't know that the world do move.
