RAILWAYS ARE LOSING MONEY

In a comprehensive article, in review of the railway situation and the pleas advanced for governmental rate-making through the agency of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin says:

"When in March, 1904, the Senate requested the Commission to report the principal changes in tariff rates since June 30, 1899, with an estimate of the effect of such changes upon the gross and net revenues of the railway corporations during each fiscal year since then, and also to report the changes in cost of operation and maintenance of the railways for said years," the Commission replied that comparing 1899 with 1903, there was an addition to the gross earnings, due to an advance in the tariff rates, amounting to $155,475,502.

"This statement was shown to be grossly enormous by railroad critics and to involve an overstatement to the extent of about $88,000,000. The Commission failed to answer the request for information regarding the net revenues and cost of operation and maintenance, on the ground that the returns for the fiscal year 1903 had not been compiled, though the figures of operating expenses were quite as much in their possession as those in regard to gross earnings. As a matter of fact, increasing expenses have exhausted the increased gross earnings of the railroads, so that while the latter showed in 1904 an increase of $65,000,000 over 1903, the net earnings decreased more than $7,000,000 as compared with the previous year."

Friend "Hooligan"

"Hooligan's Troubles" will soon make its advent at the Roseburg Theatre with a host of pretty girls, comedians and the original "Hooligan" who will exploit his troubles for the delectation of all. The pictorial illustrations of his mishaps from the big Sunday Journals are followed out. Bright music, catchy songs and funny comedians are promised by the Roseburg Theatre management as a part of this necessary adjuncts to help unfold the numerous and side-splitting catastrophes that always overwhelm the ragged hero. Scenic environments aid in the embellishment of his tribulations.

WOULD DRAW AWAY FROM THIS COUNTY

Politicians in Josephine County Already Beginning to Plan Some Schemes

The Rogue River Courier, of Grants Pass takes occasion to quote one of its politicians after this fashion:

"As to matters of legislation, Mr. Jackson is in favor of the closest relations between Jackson and Josephine counties. Any measure that may be before the legislature or any law that may be passed affects one county as much as the other. This being the fact the delegations from the Rogue river counties should be so situated that they could work as a unit and thereby exert the greater influence. As the legislative apportionment of members now stands Jackson and Josephine counties are not in the same legislative district. Josephine county has a representative all to itself and a joint senator with Douglas and Lane counties. Jackson county has a senator and two representatives of its own, and a joint representative with Douglas county.

"Under the laws of Oregon the legislature is required to readjust the senatorial and representative districts at the first session following the taking of the census by both the state and general government. The state census was taken this year so it will devolve on the legislature that will convene next winter following the election of next June, to readjust the state senatorial and representative district. Mr. Jackson favors the plan of putting Jackson and Josephine counties in the same legislative districts and he says that all the prominent men of both parties in his county favor the plan. As now arranged the joint senatorial district of Lane, Douglas and Josephine counties gives no advantage whatever to the latter county, for it being the smaller, either Lane or Douglas always gets the joint senator. As these counties lay outside of Rogue river valley their interests are often opposite to that of Josephine county and a senator residing in Eugene or Roseburg would not be so likely to work in harmony with the representative of this county as would a senator who resided here in the valley. Josephine county thus helps those big counties to increase their representation in the legislature, without the commensurate benefit that would come if the county was in a legislative district that has the fullest common interests such as the Rogue river counties have. Jackson county fares better in its joint representative with Douglas county for it gets the member every other time. The increase in population in Josephine and Jackson counties has been such that it is possible that the two counties might have a joint senator and another representative.

"This plan of joining Josephine and Jackson counties and of having a Rogue river delegation in the legislature is heartily approved in this locality."

NORMAL SCHOOL AND TRUSTEES

School Superintendent Hamlin, of Douglas county, asks Attorney General Crawford's opinion as to "whether the board of directors of a school has the right under the laws of Oregon to contract with the executive committee of the board of regents of a state normal school, allowing said executive committee to select all teachers and have exclusive control of said teachers, the board of directors turning over to the executive committee all state and other funds apportioned to said district to help pay the expenses of the state normal school, or must the board of directors of a school district contract directly with the teachers."

To which Mr. Crawford replied: "I am of the opinion that the board of directors should contract directly with the teachers. However, the board of directors and the executive committee of the regents might work together and each employ the same teachers, and then the board of directors would be contracting directly with the teachers, and they could pay out their money under the state law to the teachers with whom they had so directly contracted.—Salem Statesman.
