Listen!

Did you hear the cry? Hundreds of hundreds of monuments and tombstones cry out in anguish over the loss of a moss and grime deposited on them by Father Time.

Those silent sentinels over the resting place of departed friends are debased by their unsightly appearance and ask to be washed and polished, with the appearance of their first coming.

A few of the old ones now wear that smile of welcome to friend and stranger.

Apply to Marsters Bros. for information or address C. A. Berkman, Roseburg. He will make the old look like new.

Respectfully,
C. A. Berkman.

On Thanksgiving day the new Methodist church, just built in the Calapooia country, will be dedicated with impressive ceremonies. A grand basket dinner will be one of the attractions of the occasion, and everyone will be heartily welcome.

Lack of both time and space for this issue has crowded out some good reports of social affairs, which will appear in the succeeding issue.

There will be special Thanksgiving services at St. George's Episcopal church at 10:30 a. m. There will be an offering for the Good Samaritan Hospital.

The Ladies' Guild of St. George's church will give a concert and juvenile minstrel in the near future.

At the meeting of Oak Camp No. 125, W. O. W., which was held Monday evening, the following officers were elected to serve during the ensuing term: J. A. Buchanan, C. C.; W. A. Norman, A. L.; J. M. Throne, clerk; A. M. Sanders, banker; M. Fickle, escort; C. W. Lawson, W. H. W. Lawson, S.; E. N. Ewart, manager.

Some excitement was occasioned over the position of clerk, there being no less than three candidates in the field, but Mr. Throne won out. D. P. Fisher was appointed manager for the unexpired term of Mr. Buchanan. It was decided to organize a quartette and Prof. A. M. Sanders was appointed leader of the same. The order in Douglas county will experience quite an impetus from the recent visit of Head Consul Boak and a campaign for increase in membership will soon be inaugurated.

LIKE FALLING OFF A LOG.

While I may not be a good judge of that sort of thing (And I hope I am not), I look to me as though as a poet (Of course there are various kinds of poets and near poets) That Walt Whitman has a cinch. He didn't have to go chasing around through a rhyming dictionary (As a young lady looks through the family doctor book) For beauty (recipies) To find a word to rhyme with Napoleon. He just cut loose. And used any word he happened to know how to spell. And as for poetic feet (Clad in oxfords, brogans, rubber boots or gutters), He didn't need them in his business. (If necessary he could walk on his hands.) That is the ideal way to write poetry. (The plan should be submitted to the poets' union.) A man can write that kind with one hand tied behind him. And his mind wandering backward To the old swimming hole. Or forward to the next square meal.

There are no rules to cover the game (Rules are made but to be broken). Just string a lot of words together Across the line. (When you think you have gone far enough) Come back and start a new line. Say something occasionally if you think of anything to say (if not, it's no odds). If you run out of common words Get a geography and run in a list of states.

That's all. If it isn't poetry, what's the difference. So long as you can make a lot of people think so?

Henpecked.

"She took her pick of three men." "And ever since that she has been picking at one."

Hunting a Victim. "Why is he going around in the daytime with a lantern?" "Looking for an honest man, of course."

"Want to exhibit him as a curiosity?" "No, he is going to try to sell him mining stock."

They Fool the Experts. Full many a gem of purest ray serene, A model of good dressing and good taste, If we could peep behind the scene, Constructed only of the cheapest paste.

Had the Will To. "There is only one thing prevents her from suing him for a divorce." "What is that?" "They are not married."

J. N. Ryan of the firm of Strange & Ryan, the job printers, had a rather narrow escape from losing an eye Tuesday morning. He was out in the woods at his mother's home, cutting some kindling and one piece which he hit pretty hard, flew up and cut a bad gash in his forehead, just missing one of his eyes and making an ugly wound, which Mr. DuGas dressed and which is now healing nicely. Mr. Ryan feels thankful that it is no worse.
