Our meeting was in New York, in July 1864. I had heard of his return from California, and was prepared to empty the vials of my wrath upon his head. We accidentally ran against each other on Broadway. My slumbering indignation flamed up at once. I thought of the cook stove I had devoured, and the various articles of my furniture drank up and was about to go for him, when Ward suddenly rushed forward and grasped me by the hand, exclaiming: "Why, Gris, how are you? As I looked at him speechless with amazement, he continued: "They told me you came home round the horn, but I never knew you to go round a horn yet—join me!

Now Ward had a very persuasive way of locking his arm in another's, and in a momentary fit of weakness I—I went!

"Ward," said I, sternly, "I owe you a licking on account of that California agency business, but will put it off as long as you are a mind to," replied Ward, in a tone of generous accommodation, as though I was speaking about returning him a loan. "If you owe me a licking give it to me when you get ready. I'm in o hurry. Don't care if you never pay it."

Numerous were the unavailing efforts that I made to bring Ward to settlement. When I would commence: "Now Artemus, about that California business"—he would interrupt. "Oh, never mind that whipping. No hurry at all. Send it to me through the mail—or telegraph it."

We are just beginning to receive the Eastern papers published the morning after the nominations at Philadelphia. We find in many of them the opinion expressed that the nomination of Henry Wilson strengthens the ficket; and we frequently meet with expressions like this, from the N.Y. Times: "Mr. Wilson owes his nomination in a great measure to his own hard services and high character, but must also thank Summer for some share in bringing it about. The delegates were determined to express their opinion of the shameful slanders Summer poured out against ful slanders Sumner poured out against rights should be treated with respectful consideration.

Fifteenth—We heartily approve of the action of Congress in relation to the rebellious states, and rejoine in the growth of peace and frazernal feeling throughout the land.

Sixteenth—The Republicar party proposes to respect the rights reserved by the people to thomselves as carefully as the powers delegated by them to the State and Territorial governments. If disapproves of any resort to unconstitutional laws for the purpose of removing evils by interference with rights not surrendered by the people to either the State the National Government.
