Wry Is It.

We do not wish to find fault with the manner in which our metropolitan friends conduct their centennial affair as it is purely a matter of their own, but so long as outsiders are expected to tronize them on that occasion it certainly seems no more than right they should have a fair show. There has been considerable controversy over the rules governing the trial of steam fire engines, and now comes one well tounded complaints on the question of base ball. High Water.

The citizens of Portland are enjoy ing a new sensation in the way of high water, the like of which has not been seen by even the oldest inhabitant. The snows of Eastern Oregon and Washington Territory having succumbed to the warm weather, the have become swollen and caused the water to rise to an unprecedented hight in that stream, in turn causing a genuine flood in the way of back water in the Willamette, affecting it as far up as Oregon Crav.
