ome time since two well dressed men called he house of Mr. O. H. P. Darby, of this nty, and requested dianer. It was long r the dinner hour, but the oldest daughter. s Martha Darby, prepared thom a repast, to ch they helped themselves most liberally. y desired to know the cost of the meal, and e told that the charges were the moderate of twenty-five cents apiece. One of them k out a well filled purse, and turning his k to Miss Darby took out one quarter, which handed to her, telling her impudently that had no more. As they started away she caled to her father to make them pay for ir dinners as they ought, after putting her to trouble of preparing it for them. The old tleman thought it better to let them go, but girl's indignation had been roused by the temptible act, and she asked permission to apel them herself, which, of course, was nted, as her father seemed to have but little h in her ability to do so. Taking down the ded gun she proceeded to the door. The men i slready mounted their horses, when she lered them to stop and pay for their dinners ore going; at the same time holding the gun ked and aimed. One of them would have the money on the fence for her, but no, she ald have it in her hand or not at all, as it not the paltry sum she cared for. Warned her manner, and the fire in her eye, he disunted and deposited the coin in her palm ile she held her weapon ready to fire, with e hand, in case of an attempt being made to est it from her. A Large Tree Falls from the Bank of the River on the Forward Deck of the Willamente Chief -- A Lucky

Escape for Passengers, Officers and Crew.

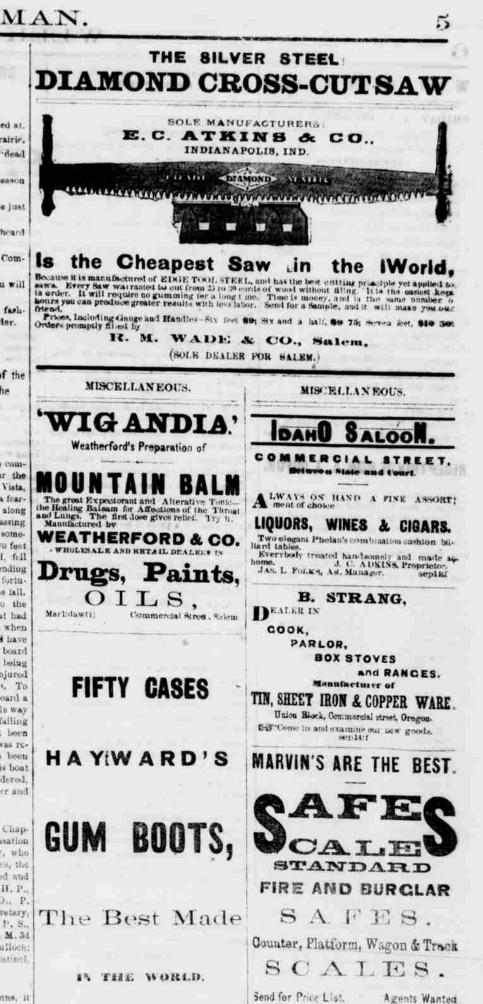

While the steamer Willamette Chief was coming down the river. Saturday, when near the mouth of the Luckiamute, above Buena Vista. she had a remarkably narrow escape from a fearful accident. The beat was steaming along down at a good rate o' speed, and was passing near the shore, which ends in a high and somewhat abrupt bank, when a tree about two feet thick at the butt, that had been uprosted, fell into the stream. The trunk of the descending tree struck on the forward deck and was fortunately broken in twals, by the force of the fall. Strange as it may appear the damage to the boat is comparisively slight. If the boat had passed a few rods further down the stream when the tree struck it, the upper works would have been badly demolished, a number on board inevitably killed, a presibility of the boat being sunk at once. As it resulted, no one was injured and the boat escaped with trivial damages. To intimate that the accident gave all on board a precious good scare, would be but a feeble way of expressing it. No one observed the falling tree until just before it struck. Had it been seen when it first started, so little time was rcquired in its descent that it would have been impossible for the pilot to have carried his boat beyond danger's reach. Altogether considered. it was a providential escape to the stamer and to all on board.

A Wonderful Cure.

Mr. Henry Isley, of Scio, has suffered, for years past, with a diseased limb, growing worse, till he began to think seriously about amputa tion, as a cure. Several prominent medical gentlemen found more than their match in Mr. Isley's case. He has finally entirely recovered under the shillful treatment of Dr. Davis, of Scio. We find Dr. Davis a social gentleman, well posted in his profession, temperate in his habits, and the sick are always safe in his ine.t.
