President Grant Signs the Compromise Bill.

His Message to Congress Giving His Reasons for Approving It.

The President in his message approving the act providing for counting the lectoral vote, says he believes the bill gives assurance of the result of the elec-tion, and will be accepted without resist-ance from the supporters of the disap-pointed candidates, and that the highest or shall not hold his place with a questioned title of right. The message alludes to the imminent peril the country has escaped through the adoption of the act. The document further declares that in no instance had the President of the Senate exercised the power of deciding the dispated election returns. In such case as this, where the result is involved in doubt, it is the duty of the law-making power to provide in advance a lawful mode of settling the difficulty. One of the two candidates must have been elected ness a controversy as to which should re-ceive or hold the office. No party or cit-izens loving their country can sacrifice too much in preserving their country. Law, liberty and progress can only exist through cheerful obedience to constitutional law. The bill is calculated to meet the present question. The country requires peace and narmony between all sections.

I follow the example heretofore occasionally presented of communicating in this mode my approval of an act to provide for and regulate the counting of the votes for President and Vice President and the decision of questions arising thereon, because of my apprehension of the imminent peril to the institutions of the country, from which, in my judgment, it affords a wise and constitutional means of escape. It is related of him, that one doy in a gambling house, being very much fascinated by play, for twenty-five hours he was unconscious of fatigue and hunger, when sud-denly, becoming aware of them he ordered some food to be brought, which proved to be some beef and two slices of bread. Placing them together he ate them. His friends gave them the name of sandwiches, and in his memento he declared this act to be the most important one of his administration.

important one of his administration. The origin of electing members by ballots came from the Greeians. When a member was to be elected, each member threw a small crumb of bread into a basket, carried by a servant on his head, and whosoever differed, flattened the pellet at one side. Shall Women Proceed.

Rav. church permitted two ladies who had been in attendance upon the Women's National Temperance Convention to occupy his pulpit on Sunday, Oct, 29th. Mr. See did not dis-pute the fact, but denied the violation of any Scriptural rule. At the opening of the trial on the 20th, a motion to dismiss the complaint was voted down. After this decision the prosecutor proceeded with his argument. The charge is that the occupation of the pulpit by women is a violation of the Book of Dicipline, chapter 5, section 5, and also of the rules laid down by the Apostle Paul in the First Epistile to the Corinthians.

It seems to us the day of Larrow-minded sticklerism is passed. A Church which in this age stops to contend about technicalities will be left behind. Shall women preach, is no longer a question of Church councils. Common consent has ridden over these au thorities and the multitude laughs at the gravity of the subject when handled by clesiastics. A straw can as easily turn the tide of Niagara as the edict of a church coun eil can change this popular current. To the question, shall women preach, common instinct from every walk of life answers, and do anything and everthing else good she desires. The Confession and the Discipline and Paul must all step aside before this tide of popular feeling. Paul may have made a mistake. He had no wife, had never listened to a woman's sermon, was closely allied to beathen customs, and sometimes spake on his own authority. However this may if living now be would certainly revise the record for this age. - P. C. Advocate,

Among the many curious things we find everywhere, it may be interesting to notice a few of them. Suppose we inquire into the origin of certain words, customs, etc. Take, for instance, the word humbug. It is a corruption of Hamburg. At one time during war on the continent of Europe, so many false reports were fabricated at Hamburg, that finally, when any one wished to show his disballef of a statement, he would say, "Ftat came from Hamburg," on, "That is Hamburg, or Humbug," which thus came to imply unbelief or credulity.

The word lady is derived from an Anglo-Saxon word, and signifies giver of bread It originated from the customs which prevailed among the wealthy English people of early times of distributing money and food to the poor. Certain days were set apart for this distribution, which was called lady-days, or gift days. The word purse meant a receptualle for aims, and was not invented to mean simply a place of safety for money.

Gloves were introduced into England in the tenth century, but were only used by the wealthy people, and were considered very valuable. As New Year's gifts they are for the constitution of the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and said Plaintiff and for the century of the control of plaintiff and for the custody of the child of Plaintiff and for the custody of the child of Plaintiff and for the custody of the child of Plaintiff and for the custody of said complaint at these and place aforcand, the Plaintiff will apply to the said court from the summent, By order of the custody of said complaint and service in this said to make evident in this said to make the complaint of said Plaintiff and for the custody of said complaint and service in this said complaint and service in this said complaint of the customy of said complaints and service in this said the said court from the customy of said complaints and service in this said the said the said court from the custom
