franchised-how they are insultedhow they are trampled under foot !-Where they vote they cannt hold office; and where they hold office they are ejected. Is not this, after all, a noble vindication of English policy; for who can doubt that America will find her true refuge from all such danger in the capacious bosom of an established church ?"

Emigration to the United States has long been a difficult problem to the European governments. At first they were eager to part with their surplus population. More recently, however, it appears that emigration to this country not only aids and strengthens us, but of water in summer. We sincerely gradually weakens and impoverishes Every day returns to the Old World those grateful trophics of experience in the New World, which tell the opressed what a refuge is opened to them here. For the first time, Great Britain, when she turns to her poople for aid in her struggles with other powers, finds that they do not and cannot respond. Emigration has decimated her resouces, and much that is left has been wasted by misgovernment and discontent. She cannot fill her thinning ranks with English hearts, and she sends to other lands to beg and buy her troops. Such are some of the teachings of experience; and such some of the causes why England is glad to find so strong an allay in her hostility to emigration as those who declare that only "Americans shall rule America." It is amusing, however, to see aljournai like the London Times echoing the knownothing cry against the "old leadera." The war recently opened by that print upon the leaders in Great Britain was a war upon notorious "in capables;" not so much, indeed, upon those who were old as upon those who were incompetent, untrustworthy, and unfit. The Times assailed the scious of nobility, the sons of aristocratic famdies, and the exclusive spirit that shuts out the middling classes. "The cold shade of aristocracy," said the Times, "is all over." But what possible simi larity is there between the so called old leaders of the democratic party in the United States, against whom the Times and the knownothings have united, and the padded peers, popinjay ministers, coxcomb statesmen, and perfumed heleeches upon the people of England! There is scarcely a leading intellect in the democratic party of this country who has not carved out his own distiny, and who has not risen to distinction by the display of those commanding talents and that executive ability which, as all past and present experience shows, have established the democratic party as the only party fitted to govern this country according to the true principles of the constitution. That the London Times should hate these leadmg minds is natural. They are the men who represent the real American opin-They are the men who have al-

Even if we give it credit for its demand for real talent in Great Britain, what must the just reader think of its clamors for mediocrity, ignorance and inexperience in the councils of the United States! Could mere hostility go any further !

The Times is, moreover, grossly mistaken in supposing that know-noth-ingism has ignored abolitionism or anti-slavery. On the contrary, up to this period every substantial know-nothing victory has been an abolition victory. Exclusive "American," knownothing ism is a party that has united in its support every anti-American element in our country; from the Englishman who scorns our naturalization laws, to the fanatic who burns to see the Union destroyed. Exclusively "pious," it travels through the land armed with the weapons of force and bloodshed. Evclusively "honest," it is supported by every discarded politician in the country. in a word it is a party worthy of the affectionate patronage of every despot in the world, and of the abhorrence of every friend of the rights of man.—Washington Union

The present critical state of European affairs will render these publications unusually interesting the present year, (1855.)
They will occupy a middle ground between the enally-written news items, crude spueulations and flying rumors of the daily Journal, and the ponderous tone of the future historian, written after the living interest and excitement of the great political events of the time shall have passed away. It is to these periodicals that readers must look for the only really intelligible and reliable history of current events, and as such, able history of current events, and as such, addition to their well-established literary, scientific and theological character, we urge them upon the consideration of the reading public.

Arrangements are completed for the receipt of early sheets from the British publishers by which we shall be able to place all our reprints in the hands of subscribers about as soon as they can be farmished with the foreign copies.
