HOME IN WINTER.

The cold has not embittered all The world that lingers in its thrall Nor have the storms hid every place Where smiles a calm, contented face.
Through blinding snows we follow still The spotless highway o'er the hill:
And you and I know many a path That home's complete enchantment hath.
As from the main road, now and then, We find at last the old home glen.

Come, you who brave life's storms, who know A colder world than all the snow, What deep, warm corner of your heart Lights up a shrine that time nor art Nor fame's wild fire nor failure's shade Can sacrilegiously invade?
Surely, there lingers sweetly there A sister thought, a sister prayer, A keepsake, or a kindly plea For home, wherever home may be.

WHY FULTON WAS MAD.

The object of the hurried trip of Senator Fulton to Umatilla county just before the opening of the present session of Congress is now made plain, although it was known to many people in the county at the time.

He was here in the interest of a few people who have made second purchases of Umatilla Indian lands, but who were in need of special legislation to make good their titles. Comparatively few people are interested in this private matter. The law on the subject was plain before the purchases were made and it was not necessary to have a general law passed to meet a few private needs.

Senator Fulton was invited to meet the people of Umatilla county in the interests of irrigation before he went to Washington, but could only find time to make a hurried visit here in the interest of a few private individuals who had need of special legislation. Because the East Oregonian criticized his action he flew into a rage and accused this paper of all kinds of misrepresentations. Now his action becomes all the more open to criticism, because of the interest he displayed in riding over the reservation with attorneys for the claimants instead of giving his time to the people of Umatilla county in general.

His dignified anger and high sounding defense made in a letter to the Morning Tribune of this city a few days after the East Oregonian criticized him for not giving Umatilla county a few hours of his time now sounds about as hollow as Senator Mitchell's defense on the floor of the senate the day before his law partner "peached" on him.

Senator Fulton said in his letter to the Tribune that he was here to learn the wishes of his constituents. Good Republicans who admired Senator Fulton will be angry when they find that about the only "constituent" consulted during his trip here was a Democratic politician and attorney for the second purchases of Indian lands.

Senator Fulton was mad because the East Oregonian saw through his shallow plan and called attention to it. Now Senator Fulton's own action in the senate in securing special amendments for a few land purchasers in this county corroborates the East Oregonian's statements at the time.— Pendleton East Oregonian.

TREATMENT OF SCOURS.

While there are medicines for horses afflicted with scours, the opinion of the best veterinarians is that such animals need much care in using and in feeding. Experience has shown that the grain feed for a horse who scours should not be heavy even though the animal is expected to do hard work.
Of course if one expects a whole day of hard heavy work from a horse with this affliction then the heavy feeding must be done, but it will be at the cost of the life of the animal.

Usually indigestion is at the bottom of the trouble which is all the more reason why care should be used in feeding. A simple home remedy is to mix equal parts of ginger, powdered charcoal and prepared chalk and give the animal a tablespoonful of it with each feed for about two months. In the meantime the animal should not be driven immediately after it has eaten nor must it be forced when perspiration is apparent on its coat. It is also a good plan to water the horse before feeding. The roughage should be sweet and clean and free from dust if possible.

After a bad attack of scours, particularly in cold weather, there is likely to be profuse perspiration so that care must be taken that the animal is well protected from cold by blankets both in and out of the stable.

METHODIST HILL JOTTINGS.

Yes, the icy rain penetrated way into the marrow of our bones last Sunday. Indeed, after two weeks of such excellent weather it was strong enough to make one shiver and shiver, regardless of sex or gender.

Talk about dull times—just watch some of our young bachelors one of these fine Sunday afternoons and evenings.

The Strasser boys have already been offered over 500 acres of grain to cut with their header next fall, a sign that the header must ultimately supplant all binders, which are impractical in this locality, where the grain doesn't reach a proper height for binding.

B. Tschanner, of Milwaukie, Oregon, has taken possession his homestead at the southern base of Round Butte.

William and Jesse McBride arrived from Spokane, Wash., recently, and are now looking for homestead locations.

John Hardt, of Spokane, who has a homestead at the Round Butte, has arrived with his family.

Jesse McBride is confined to his bed at the home of G. R. Graham, suffering from the effects of a broken rib, which he sustained by falling off Mr.
Graham's wagon.

John Hoffmann, sr., has been a sufferer from tonsillitis.

Miss Rose Dauter, of Bethany, is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs.
Theodore Hartnagel.

Mr. Lehman, of Sisters, spent Saturday and Sunday visiting at the home of Rev. E. J. Traglio.

M. Braun, of the Big Plain, spent Sunday morning at the German church and visited B. Dombrowe in the afternoon.

The Jarrett boys have grubbed a large tract of sage brush land for Theodore Hartnagel, and thereby discovered the value of their ability.

Chris Reichen feels quite content in his enlarged house. A new organ has been added, and when his proposed cook arrives there will be happiness complete in that house.

Frank A. Smith is easily the most energetic bachelor south of Willow Creek gap. He has sixty acres of spring plowing ready for seeding, all done with a single team. Ask him whether farming pays at Madras. Such men are the kind that solve the problem of proving a country's agricultural value. Such a man will live regardless of hard times. Give us more bachelors made of this mettle and we will take the community's future upon our own shoulders.

Quarterly conference was held at the Methodist Church last Saturday evening and on Sunday morning the Lord's Supper was served.

J. A. Hoffmann, recently of The Pioneer staff, is energetically at work on his homestead, having just prepared fifty acres for seeding.

Theodore Rieger's homestead is now fenced on all sides, and a cistern also adds to the family's comforts.

The German Church has become quite an imposing structure since it has received its new coat of rustic and a 30-foot spire has been added. Rev.
Traglio, who was formerly a painter by trade, will superintend the painting of the church, which is to be done this summer. When that is done this will be the handsomest church building in Crook county. Moses.

What about "doing unto others as you would they should do unto you." The editors of some of Oregon's dailies and weeklies appear to have forgotten this trite saying in their efforts to convict our Congressmen and Representatives of alleged wrong doing before they have even had a chance to speak for themselves. It is as ridiculous as the decision of the old Justice who had heard one side of the story and refused to listen to the other. His mind was made up and to listen to the other side could do no good. Be men, and let Justice rule. When a jury, after listening to the evidence of both sides, renders a verdict of guilty, then it is time enough to talk. Till then the least said the least regrets for the hereafter. A sense of fairness and the very justice upon which our law is based demands that the accused be considered innocent until proven guilty.

Now is the time to plant fruit and shade trees. The Dallas Nurseries (see ad in another column) handle nothing but home grown trees, which are fully guaranteed to be as represented. Get their prices before buying elsewhere. By leaving your orders at The Pioneer office they will receive prompt attention. Call and get a price list.
